Japan Seizes Mails, Cables And Wireless At Shanghai

Tokyo Takes Over Whangpoo Ferries

Premier Predicts New North China Regime by March, 1938.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Nov. 27.—Japan today seized control of all Chinese communications facilities in the Shanghai area, in which most of China's means of communicating with the outside world hitherto have been concentrated.

Japanese representatives entered the International Settlement to assume charge of postoffices, cable and radio administrations and broadcasting stations hitherto operated by the Chinese government.

Whether this meant Japanese censorship on all Shanghai's postal and telegraphic outlets was not immediately clear. It was feared serious international complications would arise if Japanese tried to control foreign cable and radio companies.

(Such control, however, would be a logical result of Japan's contention that she falls heir to all Chinese communications rights in the Shanghai area. The foreign companies, including the American Commercial Pacific Cable, Radio Corporation of America and Mackay Radio, British Eastern Extension and Danish Great Northern Cable companies, by contracts with the Chinese government, agreed to receive outgoing messages only from the Chinese cable and radio administrations and to submit to Chinese censorship.)

Japanese army units seized ferry properties on the Whangpoo River belonging to the extinguished Chinese city government and Japanese indicated they would appoint their own appraisers and examiners in the customs service at Shanghai.

(Shanghai dispatches, however, did not indicate that the Japanese had assumed any functions of the Shanghai municipal council, the body, responsible to the foreign consular corps, which administers the International Settlement.

In Tokyo, Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye declared Japan was ready to deal China "a fatal blow" if she did not yield.

The Premier declared Japan was prepared, however, to accept any peace move from China provided China "shows concrete evidence she is ready to abandon her policy of opposition to Japan."

He hinted Japan might advance as far as Hankow, if necessary, to impose her will on China, and strongly intimated an "independent" regime would appear in March, 1938, in North China, now almost completely conquered by Japan's legions.

Rome Sentences Eight Foes of Fascist Regime

Rome, Nov. 26 (AP).—Eight persons, including a woman, today were sentenced to prison for anti-Fascist activities. The convictions by the special tribunal brought to 100 the number sentenced for subversive action in the past few weeks. All those sentenced today were accused of Communist activity at Florence and Empoli.

Assault Charged to 11 In Busman's Beating

Two Admit Blocking Northbound Vehicle in D. C.; Driver Identifies Group; Three Held Users of 'Dangerous Weapon.'

Three of 11 striking Greyhound drivers, arrested late yesterday after an attack on William F. Dixon as he sat at the wheel of a moving Baltimore-bound bus carrying 33 passengers, were charged with assault with a dangerous weapon last night and held under $3,000 bond each.

The remaining eight, seized by Maryland State troopers near Laurel shortly after the assault, first flare of violence in the strike here, were charged with simple assault and bond was fixed at $1,000 apiece.

Charges were placed after the prisoners had been brought by metropolitan police from the Laurel substation, where they had been held, and placed in a headquarters line-up.

Dixon identified them, peering at them with one of his eyes partially closed where he had been beaten.

Cecil Hice, 32, chairman of the District chapter of the union, was held in First Precinct station for investigation a few minutes after he appeared in behalf of the 11 men arrested. Records revealed he had been arrested on a charge of assault several months ago, was released on bond and did not appear in court when his case was called.

The assault with a dangerous weapon charge was placed on two of the prisoners who admitted they were drivers of the two automobiles that zig-zagged across the path of the bus until it slowed down and the attack took place. The third was identified by Dixon as one of the men who slugged him.

Allen Barr and Joseph Trumpfheller, both of Philadelphia, were held as the drivers, and Harvey Cressman, also of Philadelphia, as a ringleader in the attack.

Those held on the simple assault charge were George Denning, Albert Kipe, Sam Talerico, J. A. Warrich, Charles Coates, Arthur Quigley, Clarke Burke and E. H. Hines.

All were from Philadelphia except Burke, who is from Camden,

Ickes Assigns Mackenzie, Budget Expert, to Investigate Conditions.

A survey of the administration of Freedmen's Hospital was ordered yesterday by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes. Supported jointly by District and Federal funds, but operated by the Interior Department, the colored institution has for years been the target of criticism by doctors and social workers.

Richard Mackenzie, who recently submitted to the Budget Bureau his report on general conditions at Gallinger Hospital, will open the Freedmen's study next week, Ickes said.

Fund Lack Handicap.

Launching of the survey by an investigator borrowed from the Budget Bureau bears out the disclosure in The Post last Wednesday that the bureau plans to adopt a policy of scrutinizing the administration of federally supported hospitals and related institution before approving fiscal estimates.

"The two big problems at Freedmen's Hospital are administrative and the lack of sufficient operating funds," E. K. Burley, Interior budget officer and Ickes' administrative assistant, said. "We think we can correct some of the administrative defects even if the hospital doesn't receive the funds it has needed for a number of years.

Manchu Train Wreck Kills or Injures 70

Tokyo (Saturday), Nov. 27 (AP).—The Domei (Japanese) News Agency reported today from Hsinking, Manchukuo, that 70 persons had been killed or injured in a head-on train collision 30 miles north of the Manchukuo capital. Cause of the accident was unknown.

17 Sailors Saved; Hope Given Up As Ship Vanished

Miami, Fla., Nov. 26 (U.P.).—The last 17 members of the crew of the S. S. Nollington Court, object of an intense search when she suddenly disappeared in a Bahaman squall while in a "sinking condition," were rescued today by the salvage tug Killereg.

Brief messages received by Tropical Radio here told of the removal of the men, for whom all hope virtually had been abandoned when they were unreported for more than 30 hours.

It was believed the 6,000-ton British freighter had run aground.

Ex-President Of Cuba Held For Murder

Fugitive Under Guard in Sick Bed; Extradition Hearing Monday.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 26.—Gerardo Machado, former president of Cuba, was arrested today at Murray Hill Hospital by a United States deputy marshal, his counsel, Francis A. O'Neill, announced.

He was arrested on an extradition request by the Cuban government which charged him with murder, embezzlement and various other crimes.

Gen. Machado, his attorney said, was arrested while he was undergoing treatment. An operation was to have been performed "when his condition makes it advisable."

Condition is Critical.

O'Neill said he had intended surrendering the former president Monday.

O'Neill said Gen. Machado's condition was critical.

He said Machado would be detained at the hospital under guard and would be moved to the Federal courthouse for a hearing Monday.

Charges against Machado were outgrowth of the 1933 Cuban revolution, in which his regime was overthrown and following which he fled the country.

Machado fled from Havana by plane August 12, 1933, to the Bahamas, where he was given temporary refuge.

Return to U. S. Secret.

From the Bahamas he fled to Santo Domingo, always pursued by fear of death at the hands of political enemies, and thence to the United States.

Threatened with arrest on warrants obtained by the new Cuban government, Machado sought safety in Canada, returing to New York secretly when his health broke.

Murder charges against the former president were based on a riot in which Havana police used machine guns on a crowd, killing 26 persons and wounding 160.

Youth Confesses He Killed Mother

Pittsburgh, Nov. 26 (AP).—Two charges of murder were placed tonight against 22-year-old Francis Brookman, who surrendered to Washington (Pa.) police, and told them he killed his mother and her uncle here six months ago.

The victims were Mrs. Mary Brookman Neeld, 37, and Paul Lustig, 48, Allegheny County reporter.

Police quoted Brookman as telling about the shooting: "We had been drinking and I was pretty full. Mother made a remark that I didn't like, and, anyway, I didn't like Lustig living there. After everyone had gone to bed, I went to my mother's room. We got into an argument and I shot her. Then Lustig came in and shot him, too."

Constance de Bower Wins Divorce at Reno

Reno, Nev., Nov. 26 (AP).—Mrs. Constance Edna de Bower, former New York actress, won an uncontested divorce decree today from Herbert F. de Bower, clearing the way for her expected marriage to Jacques A. Congress Can Vote Tax Relief At Any Time, Roosevelt Says; Weeks Needed, View in House Ways and Means Body Holds Bill Impossible at This Session.

Experts Ask Time To Draft Measure

But Committee Cancels Its Statement Citing Need for Delay.

By Robert C. Albright.

President Roosevelt yesterday declared for business tax revision as soon as Congress is able to do the job, but there are strong indications from the House Ways and Means Committee that modification will not be physically possible in the special session.

Committee intentions to issue a statement generally to this effect, but offering assurances of the "earliest possible" revision, were canceled following a conference of Ways and Means sub-committee Democrats last night.

No explanations were given by committee spokesman under a strict secrecy agreement. Chairman Fred M. Vinson, of the House tax sub-committee, said he could only repeat his former views, which have not changed.

"My position is this—we are working as fast as possible and we want to do the job in the best possible manner and as quickly as it is possible to do it."

In other quarters it was learned the committee had been informed by Treasury and joint committee experts that it would take from two to four weeks merely to draft undivided profits and capital gains tax codifications, and there is little likelihood of a committee report before the January regular session.

Meantime, the sub-committee explained possible changes in the 1935 estate and gift tax schedules in an effort to "pick up some revenue," and considered administrative changes in the tax laws to aid the taxpayer by simplifying repeal machinery.

Must Raise Farm Funds.

The group learned definitely for the first time that new farm program funds (estimated from $100,000,000 to $250,000,000), will have to be raised in the general tax revision bill.

The President's statement on taxes at yesterday's press conference followed previous indications that leaders were unwilling to take the responsibility for "hasty" tax

Army-Navy Classic To 'Empty' Capital

Washington today will be practically without its Army and Navy.

They will move on Philadelphia's municipal stadium by plane, train and automobile for the thirty-eighth annual football game between the Naval Academy and West Point. Countless automobiles will fill the highways, and 21 special trains of 12 packed cars each will leave during the morning.

The Army contingent will be headed ex officio by Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring; the Navy by Secretary Claude A. Swanson. Generals, admirals and the like will be at wholesale.

The stadium, which seats 102,000, was sold out yesterday.

Weather prospects are not so good, with mild temperatures and rain forecast.

Bill Asks 5-Day Week For Federal Workers

Senate Offered Logan Measure for Change at Same Salary, and Overtime Pay; Similar Plan Introduced in House.

A five-day week for Federal administrative employes, without reduction in pay, and with time and a half for overtime was provided in a bill introduced yesterday in the Senate by Senator M. M. Logan (Democrat), Kentucky. A similar bill already has been introduced in the House by Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), Massachusetts.

The bill sponsored by Senator Logan, a member of the Civil Service Committee, would place on the five-day basis all civilian officers and employes of the Government, including those under civil service, beginning July 1, 1938. Overtime compensation would be provided, regardless of whether the employe is on an annual or other basis, with compensatory vacation time as an alternative.

The bill stipulates that employes may be worked more than five days weekly only when the department head certifies in writing to the Bureau of the Budget that such extra work is required in the public interest or by an emergency and no suitable substitute is available. This provision does not apply to employes receiving more than $3,200 a year, although they would be placed on the five-day basis.

Employes would be permitted to add accrued leave in lieu of overtime pay to their annual leave.

A second bill introduced yesterday by Senator Logan provides for a referee to hear grievances of Federal employes involving discrimination in removal, transfer or change of grade or pay.

Chief Justice And Wife Add To Chest Gifts

Charity Officials Heartened by Renewed Efforts of Workers.

The Community Chest drive was given new impetus yesterday when Chief Justice and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes both raised their gifts to total more than $3,000. The Chief Justice added $250 to his previous gift of $2,500 and Mrs. Hughes increased her gift of $500 to $600.

Chest officials said yesterday they were "greatly encouraged" by renewed efforts of volunteer workers in the campaign and reports of new progress from all solicitation units. Key men and women in Government units, they said, are checking lists to make sure no one has been overlooked. In all divisions, workers are going back over territory already covered and reporting new gifts and increases from prior subscribers.

Special radio appeals Thanksgiving Day, they said, brought 13 pledges amounting to $270. These pledges were picked up by policemen and resulted in several telephone calls to Chest headquarters praising the officers.

"The motorcycle policeman who came for my modest pledge could not have been more courteous or more profuse in his thanks," one woman was reported to have said, "if it had been a personal gift to him."

"It is not the lack of wide support that has cut down expected receipts," said Herbert L. Willett, jr., Chest director, "but rather the lack of adequate support by those able to give. We will probably have more than 180,000 contributors before the campaign is ended officially, but there are too many people giving $25 where they could easily give $100 or more; too many giving $100 when their gift should be from $500 to $1,000; still others could give $1,000 more. In addition there are thousands of people who could have added $1 to their gift without any inconvenience."

In one instance, officials said, a solicitor unknowingly worked a neighborhood which already had been covered but brought back more than $100 for her effort.

Prof. Edgerton, Vinson Named Appeals Judges

Proposing Justice D. Lawrence Groner as Chief Justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, President Roosevelt yesterday nominated Representative Fred M. Vinson (Democrat), of Kentucky, and Prof. Henry White Edgerton, of Cornell University, to be associate justices of the court.

The President also submitted to the Senate the name of Judge John P. McMahon for another term as judge of the District Police Court. McMahon's last appointment expired in March.

If President Roosevelt's nominations are confirmed by the Senate, as expected, the District's Court of Appeals will consist of four Roosevelt appointees out of five. The fifth, Justice Groner, is a Republican, but will owe his elevation to the highest position on the local bench to the President. It will be the first court reorganized since the President put forth his court plan.

Of the four Democrats, three have

11 Missing 2 Days Reported Safe in Fog-Bound Plane

Sioux Lookout, Ont., Nov. 26 (U.P.). Eleven persons, missing for 48 hours aboard a Starratt airliner forced down in the wilderness during a fog, were reported safe tonight in a radio message from Pilot Ken Smith.

Still fog-bound on Dog Hole Bay, Smith radioed that the plane was down midway between Sioux Lookout and Pickle Lake, 135 miles from here.

Heavy fog, which froze to the wings of searching planes and forced them back, was expected to make return of the plane to its base impossible until weather over the region clears.

The ship left Pickle Lake at 4 p. m. Wednesday en route here. The 135-mile flight ordinarily requires but an hour.

President Plans 5-Point Program to Check Industry Slump.

Housing Message To Be Submitted

Revision of Policy on State Highway Aid Also Drafted.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Preparing to leave the White House for a nine-day rest under Southern sun to recuperate from his recent illness, President Roosevelt yesterday concentrated on setting into motion five lines of activity against the industrial recession which has been worrying him.

Mr. Roosevelt made these announcements:

1. He was ready for revision of laws taxing business as soon as Congress was ready to undertake that task.

2. He has finished and will send to Congress on Monday his special housing message urging revisions of the FHA insurance law to encourage the flow of private capital into such undertakings on a large scale.

3. He will send to Congress on Tuesday a message recommending revision of the law governing Federal aid to the States for highways, to effect economies necessary in his effort to balance the Federal budget.

4. He has issued orders that Government departments proceed at once to the purchase of $245,000,000 of material needed during this fiscal year in order to give industry the benefit of this business now when it needs it.

5. Further efforts will be made to persuade the public utilities to commence a needed billion-dollar construction program, with discussions between the President and utility executives to be resumed on the former's return to Washington.

Pay Roll Cuts Feared.

Meanwhile, the American Federation of Labor in its monthly "Survey of Business" described the current recession as "a temporary check in our progress toward larger production volumes and higher standards of living" and appealed to industry not to prolong the slump by reducing pay rolls now.

"A number of factors will tend to revive production in the near future," the economic advisers of the A. F. of L. asserted. "There are large depression shortages still to be made up in building, railroad equipment, electrical equipment, industrial machinery and in consumers' goods. Prices are now being readjusted from last spring's inflation; prices of stocks are already deflated. Wage increases have lifted workers' buying power to levels justifying larger production of consumers' goods as soon as current inventories are consumed and workers temporarily laid off return to work . . .

"Enough effective demand exists to lift production in the near future in both producer and consumer industries; it would be folly to checkmate the forces of recovery by fear and deliberate curtailments.

A. F. L. Offers Program.

"1. Maintain wages and employment at the highest possible level with firm determination to avoid wage cuts.

"2. In any industry where sustained demand and profitable oper-

Senators Score Crop Aid Bill as Regimentation

Burke Calls Enforcing of Quotas 'Worse Than Russia or Italy.

By the United Press.

Floor opponents of the makeshift crop control bill assailed the measure yesterday as regimenting farmers "worse than anything in Russia or Italy."

Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), Nebraska, leader of the Supreme Court fight in the Senate, joined other Democrats and Republicans today in fiery denunciation of the Senate's crop measure.

Meanwhile, the House Agriculture Committee which is split by dissention, voted 16 to 7, to report its own bill based upon soil conservation principles. Chairman Marvin Jones (Democrat), Texas, said he would file his report today so that the House can open debate next Monday.

In the Senate, the House bill faces bitter controversy with foes girding to attack it for alleged lax production control features, failure to include dairying interests, and unsatisfactory corn provisions.

Burke assailed provisions of the Senate bill making marketing quotas binding upon all farmers if approved by two-thirds of them in a referendum.

"I doubt whether you will find anything worse than that in Russia or Italy," he exclaimed.

Senator Millard Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, warned that he would seek to amend the bill to make discretionary, instead of mandatory, powers of the Secretary of Agriculture to suspend the marketing quotas if they are opposed by more than one-third of the farmers.

Vandenberg Is Critical.

Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, denounced provisions that would make farmers subject to criminal action if they failed to produce records showing their participation in the program, which, he said, not "90 of the 96 Senators understand."

Senator James P. Pope (Democrat), Idaho, coauthor of the measure, said he would agree to an amendment protecting the farmer making an "honest effort" to comply with requirements, while Senator George McGill (Democrat), Kansas, the other coauthor, said the measure was favored by most farmers.

As the Senate recessed until Monday, Majority Leader Alben W Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, warned that he would convene the chamber every day at 11 a. m., an hour earlier than usual, until "this bill is out of the way."

"It is obvious we will never get this bill finished during the special session if we limit ourselves to one speech a day," he said.

Gravel Research Unit Moves to Md.

Establishment of a research foundation at the University of Maryland by the National Sand and Gravel Association was announced yesterday by the association.

Located at the present time in Washington, the association will remove its testing and research equipment to its new quarters at Colege Park, Md., shortly, and operations will begin the first of the year.

Research, begun at the founding of the association in 1928, will be continued and expanded by the foundation, and the activities of the organization will be managed by a joint advisory committee, on which the university and association will be equally represented.

Dean S. S. Steinberg, of the college of engineerin, will be a member of the advisory committee, which will be headed by Stanton Walker, director of engineering for the Sand and Gravel Association.

Roosevelt to Make 9-Day Trip South

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt expects to leave the Capital by special train late tonight for four or five days of fishing in Florida waters.

He will embark Monday morning at Miami on the yacht Potomac and cruise leisurely in Eastern Coast waters. He probably will land in the same vicinity.

Altogether, the President will be away nine days. On his way back to Washington, he will stop at Warm Springs, Ga., for a dinner with the infantile paralysis patients undergoing treatment there. He expects to spend one day at Warm Springs and then make a brief informal talk at Gainesville, Ga., before returning to Washington.

New Deal Has Spent Four Years Trying to Curb Dancing Index Figures—With What Result?

By Franklyn Waltman

WALTMAN.

FOREMOST among the objectives of the New Deal as conceived in 1933 and as administered for four years was the elimination of dancing index figures, or, as some of the brain trust spokesmen have explained it, froning the peaks and valleys out of our financial and industrial operations.

The thought was expressed that booms and depressions were the most vicious economic evils afflicting mankind. If these could be wiped out—if the business cycle could be abolished, if things could happen only because "we planned it that way," then men and women would be happy and the more abundant life would be within the reach of all.

As illustrated by the writings and speeches of Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell and those other national planners who supplied the New Deal with its philosophy, President Roosevelt and his Administration set their faces to accomplish this end. Their objective might be summed up in the single word "stability"—stable production, stable employment and stable prices. Its achievement was a corollary to the main New Deal thesis of creating a more abundant life for everyone.

By achieving stability in our economic and financial undertakings, waste was to be eliminated; capital, assured of greater security, would be satisfied with less profit; there would be no place for the speculator, and thus there would be more for the laborer, who then would be rewarded in just proportion to his contribution to general well-being.

Such was the underlying theory. It was to be achieved by restricting the financial and industrial entrepreneurs. Industry was to be disciplined. Individualism was to be curbed—the greedy and rapacious banished. Toward those ends there were enacted the undistributed corporation profits tax, the revised capital gains tax, the N.R.A., the Security and Exchange laws, the utility legislation, the coal control act and several similar measures.

Has this program succeeded in bringing about the objectives, namely, the elimination of violent up and down fluctuations in industrial and financial operations? The record indicates exactly the reverse—that under this program the fluctuations have become more violent. The indices have danced as they never have before.

Leaving aside the violent fluctuations which have taken place in the security markets, consider the Federal Reserve Board's index figure for industrial production, a figure generally accepted as reflecting the prosperity of the country. Based on the average of industrial production in the years 1923 to 1925 as equaling 100, this index in the current depression touched bottom at 58, after adjustment for seasonal variations, in July, 1932. Since that time there have been six major recessions.

It went down 7 points in three months from December, 1932, to March, 1933.

It went up 41 points in the four months from March to July, 1935.

It went down 28 points in the four months from July to November, 1933.

It went up 11 points in the seven months from November, 1933, to June, 1934.

It went down 12 points in the three months from June to September, 1934.

It went up 19 points in the four months from September, 1934, to January, 1935.

It went down 5 points from February to May, 1935.

It went up 16 points from May to December, 1935.

It went down 8 points from December, 1935, to May, 1936.

In the next month it shot up 8 points.

In the next eight months, from April to December, 1936, it went up another 20 points.

It went down seven points in the next month.

It went up four points in the following month and remained stable for three months.

It dropped four points during the next two months, June and July, 1937.

It was three points higher in August over July, each of this year.

It dropped 14 points from August to October, each of this year and the end is not yet in sight.

Thus within the last 12 months the Federal Reserve's adjusted index figure for industrial production has been as high as 121 (in December, 1936) and as low as 103 (preliminary figure for last month and the figure for this month will be in the nineties. There has not been a year since the New Deal commenced that this index figure has not fluctuated up and down 10 to 20 points.

Leonard P. Ayres, who, as a business analyst has spent a life studying the fluctuations of business, industry and finance, surely can speak authoritatively about such matters. He terms the fluctuations which have occurred during the New Deal as "something new in the history of American business."

"We have never before experienced," he asserts, "a period of recovery so constantly characterized by encouraging advances alternating with disappointing declines. The record of this recovery period in other countries shows that it is a distinctly American phenomenon."

Col. Ayres presents a chart showing the progress of American industrial recovery as a line as jagged and erratic as the Sierra Nevadas, with that of England virtually a straight line moving gradually upward. He points out that since 1932 "there has not been a single reversal" in English recovery.

He explains that on the scale of his diagram, based on Federal Reserve Board and British Board of Trade figures, there has been a net gain of 54 points in the rate of American production from September, 1932 to September, 1937 but that "in order to achieve that net gain production has advanced 147 point and declined 93 points in the five years, or a total movement of 240 points to make a net gain of 54 points."

"Meanwhile," he adds, "the British quarterly index had moved 45 points to gain 45 points."

Can this be the "stability" which the New Deal promised us?

TVA Director Denies Tax War On Rival Utility

Wanted to 'Tax Hell' Out of Firm, Power Co. Witness Charges.

By the United Press.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov. 26.—David E. Lilienthal, Tennessee Valley Authority director, advised the City of Chattanooga to "tax hell out of" a private utility, a power company witness testified today at a hearing on a suit challenging validity of the New Deal "yardstick" agency.

W. C. Wilkerson, former Chattanooga city commissioner, testified before a three-judge Federal court that Lilienthal said the way for municipalities to get rid of competition from private utilities was to "tax hell out of them"—or words to that effect.

Lilienthal Issues Denial.

"I made no such statement to the representaatives of the City of Chattanooga or anybody else." Lilienthal said in a statement released from TVA headquarters in Knoxville through the Authority's attor eys here.

"The policy of the Tennessee Valley Authority has been from the start to refuse to advise municipalities on the subject of acquiring distribution systems."

The testimony of Wilkerson followed a court ruling which removed another of the foundation contentions from the suit filed by 18 power companies, including subsidiaries of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation and Electric Bond & Share, which operate in the Tennessee Valley. Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Florence E. Allen, presiding, stated the court would not admit evidence showing consumers had been attracted from private companies by the cheap "yardstick" electrical power rates of the TVA.

Conversations Recalled.

Wilkerson related conversations at a meeting between Chattanooga city officials and Lilienthal in Knoxville during 1934 concerning the municipality's plans to acquire a distribution system to use TVA power in competition with the Tennessee Electric Power Co.

"Mr. Lilienthal, after stating that it would take from 50 to 75 per cent of the electric business in Chattanooga and vicinity to break even (on operation of a municipal system using TVA power in competition with TEPC), was asked how long it would take to get that much business," Wilkerson testified.

"He said it would take from four to five years. I asked him myself how the city would survive pending this losing period.

"And Mr. Lilienthal replied, 'Tax hell out of them'—or words to that effect.

"And I asked him if that could be done, and he said that the Supreme Court of the United States had just recently held in the Puget Sound, Seattle Sound case, that a municipality could tax a public service although doing business in competition with it."

Token Payments on War Debts Demanded by Senator J. Hamilton Lewis.

POUNDING AWAY at his oft-repeated demand for war debt payments, Senator J. Hamilton Lewis (Democrat), Illinois, yesterday again took the Senate floor to insist that the United States require "at least token payments" on war obligations before negotiating new riciprocal trade agreements with the defaulting debtor countries. He said:

"In the Orient and in Europe changes are taking place within nations that may prompt them to make their relations with the United States react to their benefit. Unless this country asserts itself, she may further be imposed upon—militarily."

THE HOUSE Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee will begin hearings December 2 on recommendations of the Maritime Commission to overcome financial problems of the American shipping industry.

WORLD stabilization of currencies and the resumption of gold payments will result from the domestic silver purchase policy of the United States, predicted Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), Utah, in a radio address yesterday.

The President's executive order, obliging the Treasury to buy newly mined silver at 77.57 cents an ounce, despite the world market prices of about 45 cents an ounce, has given employment to between half a million and a million persons, Thomas said.

MODERN cattle rustlers are a very real menace to ranchers in the West, declared Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, in introducing a bill yesterday which would "streamline" Federal laws to make transportation of stolen animals across State lines punishable by a maximum fine of $5,000 and five years' imprisonment. He pointed out that present-day rustlers load stolen animals in trucks, leaving tire tracks instead of hoof prints.

Church Declares He'll Force More Holiday Sessions

By the Associated Press.

Representative Ralph E. Church, Evanston (Ill.), Republican yesterday said he would force more House sessions like Thanksgiving Day's "if there's any more shilly-shallying."

Church has used his privilege to compel the House to meet when the Democratic leaders sought to adjourn. He said he "wanted the House to go about repealing the surplus profits tax at once, instead of wasting time."

He said he would have moved Thursday for a House session yesterday, but could not do so "without putting a lot of my friends on the spot" by forcing a roll call which would have shown the absentees.

Sherrill to Find Jobs for 2,000 In Cincinnati

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Nov. 26.—Promising jobs to 2,000, this city of 600,000 set about today to translate into reality the philosophy of City Manager C. O. Sherrill that "no able-bodied man willing to work should be without employment."

"We're attempting," said Sherrill, former director of Public Buildings and Parks in Washington, D. C., "to give a constructive answer to the oft-heard charge that 'you can't get people to work.'"

A police-estimated throng of 2,000 descended on the municipal welfare offices today and were registered for employment.

Those called will be put to work "doing things that otherwise would not be done for lack of money," Sherrill said, listing stone-crushing, wrecking of abandoned or condemned buildings or dirt haulage as typical tasks.

Workers will be paid by voucher redeemable for coal, groceries and clothing. An original pay scale of 50 cents hourly eventually will range upward to $75 monthly.

Sherrill simultaneously announced plans for the issuance, December 1, of meal cards to be sold by the city at 10 cents each. They will entitle the bearer to a "nice, well-cooked meal" in a city-operated welfare station, Sherrill said, adding:

"If people will only buy these and give them away in lieu of cash money, we should have no begging on the streets this winter."

Sherrill said that, so far as he knew, no other city was attempting comparable plans for relief.

Swanson Would Reopen Torpedo Plant in Virginia

Expansion of torpedo production by reopening the factory at Alexandria was advocated yesterday by Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson in a letter to Representative William M. Cirtron, of Connecticut.

Operation of the Alexandria station, he continued, would not interfere with the activities of the plant at Newport, R. I. He added that full-time production by both plants could not fill the fleet's need for "several years."

The Navy believes it is "unwise" to concentrate torpedio production in one place, Swanson also pointed out.

Citron and Representative Aime J. Foran, of Rhode Island, had protested against reopening the Alexandria torpedo factory. The Navy Department, they said, is seeking $5,000,000 to operate the station, closed several years ago.

Sixty Years of Washington Society Reviewed by Hope Ridings Miller, Poe Sisters

If politics is Washington's vocation, society is its avocation, and sometimes it's hard to tell where one ends and the other begins. From the December day in 1877, when the Beale-Carroll wedding made the front page of The Washington Post, to the present, society has been important news in the eyes of Post editors. The story of Washington society, as reflected in the pages of The Post for the past 60 years, is an intensely interesting one. It has been written specially for the Sixtieth Anniversary Edition of The Washington Post by Hope Ridings Miller and by the Poe Sisters, one of the many fascinating reviews of various phases of Washington life during the past 60 years which will make this Anniversary Edition one you will enjoy thoroughly. Slugger Sought For Murder of Thriller Editor

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 26.—The homicide squad tonight swung into a search for a phantom-like slugger who slipped unobserved out of a small hotel early yesterday, leaving a former publisher and foreign correspondent gasping away his life.

Victim of as sinister a mystery as ever he produced in book form, Claude H. Kendall, 46, died from the effects of a severe beating. His body, sprawled on the floor of his eighth-floor room, a sheet wound loosely about the neck, was found hours later by a maid.

At first, not finding signs of a struggle or evidences of robbery, police theorized that he had fallen against a piece of furniture.

But today, after an autopsy, Medical Examiner Thomas A. Gonzales announced that Kendall, an ensign in the Navy in the World War, had been beaten and kicked so savagely he suffered multiple hemorrhages of the head, resulting in asphyxiation.

Tracing his movements, police learned he had attended a Thanksgiving eve party on another floor of the hotel, which is in a comparatively quiet neighborhood near Madison Square, and drunk rather freely.

Shortly after midnight two men friends helped him to his room and left him in his bed, removing only his shoes. Later he apparently aroused himself, put on his shoes, and went out for another drink.

When he returned, hotel employes said, he was accompanied by a stranger, who went to his room with him. Neither the elevator operator nor the desk clerk saw this man leave.

When found, Kendall's body was fully clothed. His belongings were undisturbed.

The victim, who served two years after the war with the United States Shipping Board, went to Argentina in 1922 as correspondent for the United Press. He remained there a year and a half. Later he established his own publishing firm and turned out several "mystery thrillers."

For the last six months he had been employed as associate editor of James T. White & Co., Fifth avenue publishing firm.

Dominican Envoy In D. C. to Confer On Haiti Dispute

By the Associated Press.

The Dominican government's special envoy to Washington prepared yesterday for conferences with President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull regarding the controversy between his country and neighboring Haiti.

Dr. Manuel de Jesus Troncoso de la Concha, who flew here from the Dominican Republic as the representative of President Rafael L. Trujillo, conferred with Undersecretary Sumner Welles at the State Department. Dr. Troncoso was accompanied to the conference by Dominican Minister Andres Pastoriza.

The Haitian-Dominican dispute broke out last month, when delayed press dispatches said a few persons had been killed in fighting on the northern frontier. Later Foreign Minister Georges Leger, of Haiti, said from 3,000 to 5,000 Haitians had been "massacred" inside Dominican territory.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Friday Morning Music Club presents Martha Gwinn, pianist, and Elsa Radle, contralto (Marjorie Davis, accompanist), in Barker Hall. Program: Toccata in D major (Bach), "Papillons" (Schumann), Intermezzo and Capriccio (Brahms), Two Pieces, "Aus meinem Tagebuch" (Max Reger), "Cracovienne Fantastique" (Paderevski), "Plaisir d'Amour" (Martini il Tedesco), "As Fair Is She as Noonday Light" (Rakhmaninov), "Tilimbom" (Stravinski), "Adieu, Forets" (Chaikovski).

Members of the Friday Morning Music Club and their guests enjoyed yesterday some bright and piquant piano playing by Martha Gwinn, of Baltimore, who has a pleasant touch and technical dexterity. None of her selections demanded great interpretative insight, but called rather upon the faculty of poetic fantasy with which she seemed well equipped. The Bach Toccata in D major was neatly performed with perhaps a little too much use of the damper pedal and consequent blurring of lines.

While one disagreed with certain details in her reading of Schumann's "Papillons," the work as a whole came through in its right impulsive and romantic character. The deficiencies lay in the weakness of the inner voices, which are very important in the playing of Schumann. One found most satisfaction in her vivacious performance of Paderevski's "Cracovienne Fantastique," in which she correctly stressed the Chopinesque resemblences, and in her perceptive treatment of the two pieces from Max Reger's neglected "Tagebuch."

Elsa Radle, whose contralto voice has warmth and persuasiveness when emotionally charged, contributed the familiar "Plaisir d'Amour" of Martini; the equally popular aria of Jeanne d'Arc from Chaikovski's "Orleanskaya Deva;" one of Rakhmaninov's finest lyrics, "As Fair Is She as Noonday Light," and the amusing "Tilimbom," in which Strevinski essayed to write in the manner of Musorgski.

"Plaisir d'Amour" is one of the curiosities of music. Usually attributed to Padre Giambattista Martini, it was written by Johann P. A. Schwartzendorf, who spent most of his life in France and was oddly enough known by the Italian name, Martini il Tedesco. Of the many works by the "German Martini," we know today only this one song, originally titled "Romance du Chevrier dans 'Celestine,' nouvelle de M. le Chevalier Florian." Although penned by a German with an Italian nickname, it is thoroughly Gallic in character.

Dying Youth Tries to Cheer Father

Blood of 2,000 Offered to Halt Deadly Disease

By the United Press.

Windsor, Ontario, Nov. 26.—More than 2,000 persons—one in London, England—tonight had offered their blood in an effort to save the swiftly-ebbing life of Weston W. Fletcher, the victim of a rare disease from which few recover.

While newspapers, radio stations and an airline co-operated in the wide search for a blood donor who has recovered from the ailment physicians at Grace Hospital announced they had a second patient suffering from the same disease.

Already the floor of volunteers had produced one man whose blood could be used to treat the second victim, Robert Schaeffer. He was given a transfusion tonight by Dr. U. J. Durocher. His benefactor was A. A. Rickerd, a 40-year-old Detroit salesman.

But Rickerd's blood was of a type which would not mix with Fletcher's and the 28-year-old father of a baby boy continued to sink.

Dr. H. A. Simpkins, surgeon in Fletcher's case, tonight received a transatlantic telephone call from Samuel Stanford, who recovered from the rare malady about six years ago. Stanford, a former patient of Dr. Simpkins, offered to leave his work with the Ford Motor Co. in London and rush to Windsor in an attempt to save young Fletcher's life.

Court Bars Cement Tax on Hull Plea

New Orleans, Nov. 26 (AP).—A three-judge Federal court tonight issued a preliminary injunction against enforcement of a Florida cement inspection law opponents described as one which might lead to chaos for American foreign trade.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull had stepped into the case as "amicus curiae" (friend of the court) to denounce the law, which places an inspection fee of 15 cents per 100 pounds on cement imported into Florida from foreign countries.

"The inference is irresistible," the Government's brief said, "that the fee was not intended to raise revenue to defray actual expenses, but on the contrary is an attempt to lay a virtual embargo on the importation of cement."

3 Closed Banks Will Distribute $562,100 Here

13,210 D. C. Depositors to Receive Checks Before Christmas Day.

Checks totaling $562,100 will be mailed before Christmas to depositors of three District banks in receivership, according to an announcement made yesterday by Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor.

Largest of the dividends is $386,850 to be distributed among 8,704 creditors of the District National Bank. With payment of this amount, the District National Bank will have met 85 per cent of the claims against it.

Allotment of $70,000 to 1,890 depositors of the Washington Savings Bank will bring total payment from that institution to 100 per cent.

Dividends from the Seventh Street Savings Bank will aggregate 90 per cent of all claims when 2,616 depositors receive $105,300 in the latest payment.

Yesterday's statement from the Comptroller made no reference to progress of liquidation at the 13 other insolvent banks in Washington, but it was generally anticipated that dividends will be paid shortly by several of these institutions.

Comptroller O'Connor recently stated in a speech before the Woman's National Democratic Club that approximately $7,000,000 would be paid eventually by District banks in receivership.

'Chicken and Hen' Ruled Insufficient For Moratorium

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 26.—Only a genuine tiller of the soil may avail himself of the Frazier-Lemke act which permits farmers to obtain a three-year debt moratorium, Federal Judge Phillip Forman ruled today.

He denied the petition of Benjamin Haddad, of Neshanic, Somerset County, who sought to enjoin the First National Bank of Plainfield from foreclosing a $14,200 mortgage on his property, noting it was the first case he recalled "where a little farmer tried to take advantage of a mortgagebank."

Myron L. Levy, counsel for Haddad, contended he is "a real farmer," but the court said "you have to have more than one chicken and a hen to operate a farm."

Germany Home Of Revolt Plot, Claim in Paris

Military Tribunal Convicts 2 Former Germans as Paper Makes Charge.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Nov. 26.—The Paris newspaper Ce Soir declared today investigations of a huge conspiracy against the republic have indicated headquarters of the revolutionary committee was in Germany.

Officials of the Surete Nationale declined to confirm Ce Soir's story, but the cordon of mobile guards around the Ministry of the Interior was reinforced and all vehicles entering or leaving Paris were stopped for investigation.

A military tribunal at Nancy convicted two naturalized French brothers, former residents of Germany, of espionage and sentenced them to prison terms. They were charged with selling information to a "foreign service." Two other former Germans were convicted of espionage last Monday at Metz.

Raids and searches for caches of arms continued in most parts of France. Enough arms to equip thousands of shock troops have been uncovered.

To the number of prominent persons under arrest was added Duke Pozzo di Borgo, held on charges of "association with malefactors."

Others under arrest were:

Eugene Deloncle, 47, an engineering consultant, described as the founder and chief of the "Csar" (Le Comite Secret d'Action Revolutionnaire).

Gen. Edouard Duseigneur, retired former chief of staff of the air ministry, said to be the chief of Les Cagoulards (the Hooded Ones), a group believed to be one section of the larger body of revolutionists, perhaps the "Csar." He was described as one of Leloncle's aides.

Henri Deloncle, Cannes jeweler, brother of Eugene.

Among those arrested were three Algerians, who, Surete officials declared, had received $5,000 as organizers of shock troops among natives of France's North African colonies. About 400 Moroccans and Algerians in Paris were said to have been enlisted.

Nazis Attempting To Found Church To Preach Beliefs

Berlin, Nov. 26 (U.P.).—A movement has been launched to found a third church in Germany, harmonizing with Adolf Hitler's racial theory of "blood and soil" and designed to end the long strife between the government and anti-Nazi evangelical pastors, it was reported tonight.

A group of prominent evangelical pastors and theologians of the Reich were said to be in support of the "third church" and that it might make its appearance within two months.

The theological counterpart of the third Reich, supplanting the Second Church established by Martin Luther during the reformation, was described as more than "just another attempt" to bring German religion into line with Nazi anti-Semiticism and the worship of blood and country above God.

Born After Death Of Mother, Child Now 3 Days Old

Charlotte, N. Y., Nov. 26 (AP).—A baby born at Mercy Hospital here a few minutes after her 19-year-old mother died became 3 days—or 72 hours—old at 6 p. m. today.

At that time the attending physicians said the infant, brought into the world by a postmortem Caesarean operation, had "more than a fair chance" to live and develop into a normal child.

The young father, Robert E. Helms, employe of a motor express company, has viewed his daughter only through the glass of the nursery, where she is being kept alive in an incubator. The baby, a month and a half premature, weighed 3 pounds 12 ounces at birth.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 26.—Pennsylvania, debating today whether to permit an increase in freight rates, received word that the National Bituminous Coal Association would ask the Interstate Commerce Commission to reconsider its sanction of higher rates on shipments which cross State lines.

Denis J. Driscoll, chairman of the Public Utility Commission, said he was advised that the National Association would ask the I. C. C. to withdraw its approval of a 3 to 11 cents a ton increase in interstate rates on soft coal.

D. C. Professor Deplores Youth Jobs Problem

Rev. George Johnson, of Georgetown, Says Millions Idle After Graduation.

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 26.—The Rev. George Johnson, professor of education at Georgetown University, Washington, declared today that "probably one-half of the 10,000,000 youths in the United States who between 1929 and 1934 reached the age when they might be gainfully employed had not found employment in 1935."

Speaking at the opening session of the fifty-first annual convention of the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, Father Johnson declared: "Since 1935 there has been some improvement, yet at the beginning of 1937 there were perhaps three to four million people who were through with school, but were unable to find employment.

"There is something deeply wrong," he said, "about a social order that creates plenty, but fails to distribute it equitably."

Dr. David E. Weglein, superintendent of schools, Baltimore, Md., was elected president of the association. He succeeds David A. Robertson, president of Goucher College.

Short Weight Laid To Policeman, Coal Company Owner

Corporation Counsel John O'Day charged two cases of short weight, two of failing to have proper delivery tickets and two of failing to have the name and address of the dealer on the trucks.

The Department of Weights and Measures had agents make two purchases, both of which were alleged to be under weight.

All Britain Pays Final Respects To MacDonald

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 26.—Funeral services were held today in the Warriors' Chapel of Westminster Abbel yor James Ramsay MacDonald, the Scottish farmer lad who became prime minister as head of the Labor Party he built.

Even labor leaders who maintained MacDonald was a "traitor" to their party because he joined Conservatives in forming a national government in 1931 honored him as a national figure by serving as pallbearers.

Maj. Clement Atlee, leader of the Labor opposition, and Sir Walter Citrine, general secretary of the Trades Union Congress, took their places as pallbearers with Conservative Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and Earl Baldwin, MacDonald's closest associate in the coalition government and his successor as prime minister. The Duke of Gloucester represented his brother, King George VI.

The Warriors' Chapel was stilled for a moment at noon, and then the chanting choir walked slowly through the nave, followed by the coffin, draped in a union jack. The bier stood at the foot of the chancel steps, on which lay 12 wreaths, chosen from many.

One was from the cabinet. Another was from the crew of the cruiser Apollo, which brought MacDonald's body home from Bermuda. The 71-year-old statesman died November 9, aboard a liner carrying him to South America for a rest. A third wreath came from Mrs. Chamberlain, wife of the prime minister, flowers gathered in the garden at Chequers, loved by MacDonald when it was his official country residence.

After the pomp of Westminster only his sons and daughters accompanied MacDonald's ashes by train to Scotland for burial tomorrow at lonely Lossiemouth, where he was born, the son of a farm servant.

Jealous of Eyes, Man Slew Sister, Verdict of Jury

London, Nov. 26 (AP).—A coroner's jury returned a verdict of murder and suicide today in the Ibsen-like tragedy of Dr. Naomi Dancy, 49, widely-known baby specialist, and her half-blind invalid brother, Maurice Tribe, 43, who was jealous of her "beautiful eyes."

The brother, a chemist who lost one eye in the war and brooded over the failing sight of the other, was found dead in the physician's stately mansion, his throat slashed.

He had shot his sister to death—through the eyes—as she lay in her bed.

Committee Urges Child Labor Law

New York, Nov. 26 (AP).—The National Child Labor Committee yesterday recommended enactment of national child labor legislation at the special session, and completion of State action on the pending Federal amendment, adopted thus far by 28 States.

The committee asked Congress to remedy child labor abuses in industrial establishments engaged in interstate commerce.

The pending Federal amendment, which requires ratification by eight additional States to become law, provides the only method of protecting children employed in noninterstate industries, the committee said, criticizing as inadequate a substitute amendment proposed by Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan.

Los Angeles Hill Slides 13½ Inches, Cuts Water Main

Los Angeles, Nov. 26 (AP).—Agitated Buena Vista Hill in Elysian Park put on a better show today.

Water spouted from the base of the cliff. Earlier there was an instantaneous drop of 1 inch. This was followed by a faster rate of slippage, and ominous rumblings became louder and more frequent.

The water, flooding streets in the vicinity, came from a severed 24-inch water main running along the base of the hill.

Park Supt. Gilbert Skutt said the mass of rocks and earth had slipped downward 14½ inches and outward 13½ inches in the past 24 hours. In all, Buena Vista Hill has dropped down approximately 5 feet and northward 3½ feet. But Skutt said little damage would result should a landslide occur.

'State Medicine' Spurned in Plea For Public Funds

Boston, Nov. 26 (AP).—A committee of 430 physicians, many of them nationally prominent, today issued a statement rejecting "so-called State medicine" in the sense of regulation of medical care directly by government.

The same committee on November 7 placed before the profession a statement that medicine could no longer be financed by private endowments and payments from the sick.

Today's statement, said Dr. Allan M. Butler, spokesman, was designed to correct misinterpretations on the original proposals.

The November 7 declaration suggested use of public funds, under the control of existing institutions and "only upon the basis of demonstrated need." It added that "the health of the people is a direct concern of the Government." This, the committee declared in its current statement, was not "so-called State medicine."

Hitler Removes Schacht; Gives Post to Goering

By the United Press.

Berlin, Nov. 26.—Fuehrer Adolf Hitler tonight accepted the resignation of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht from the office of Reich Minister of Economics, where the "financial wizard" was engaged in a feud with Col.-Gen. Hermann W. Goering, but retained him as his personal adviser.

Goering, already in control of the finance ministry, was named to the post but only on a temporary basis unil January 15 when Walther Funk, undersecretary of the propaganda ministry, will assume command of Germany's economic destiny.

Schacht, who had tried twice since May to resign because of disagreement with Goering over the latter's management of the Reich's four-year plan of economic self-sufficiency, will remain as president of the Reichsbank.

Acknowledged to be Europe's No. 1 financial expert since he abolished Germany's post-war inflation, Schacht will be a Reich minister without portfolio.

Der Fuehrer, in a personal letter to Schacht, thanked him for what he had done for Germany and expressed satisfaction that he had consented to remain as his personal adviser.

Rebels Move Base For Almeria Fight

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Nov. 26 (AP).—The insurgent base of action tonight was transferred from the cold-ridden north of Spain to warmer territory for a smash against Almeria, government port on the southeastern coast. Insurgent officers at Irun said preparations were complete for a southern offensive to sart within a few days.

Order Is Given For Freedmen Hospital Study

mended increase of the clerical force, addition of at least two more social service workers, more funds for the housekeeping and dietary departments which are "woefully undermanned" and numerous structural improvements.

"All painted areas are sadly in need of repainting," he said. "Roofs are leaking in many spots, some of them directly over the patients' heads. These beds are evacuated in the presence of heavy rains."

Thirty-year-old plumbing is still in use, he said, adding that "any day major defects may assume such proportions that hospital activities will have to suspend."

Last year Dr. Winford H. Smith and Dr. G. Canby Robinson, both of Johns Hopkins University, recommended unification of administrative functioning following a survey of Freedmen's Hospital. They criticized the practice of dividing organization of the medical staff into two parts, the civil service group appointed by the Secretary of the Interior for both professional and administrative work and the visiting staff for patient care and medical education.

Experience Extensive

"Mr. Mackenzie has had extensive experience in hospital administrative management problems," Ickes said in announcing the forthcoming investigation. "He was executive secretary of the Delaware Board of Charities for three years and has performed consultant services for the New York State Reconstruction Commission, the New York Academy of Medicine and the Louisiana State Board of Charities.

"He also was employed by the Bureau of the Budget this fall to conduct a comparative study of operating standards and costs in certain hospitals maintained by the Federal Government. In this connection, he visited Freedmen's Hospital about six weeks ago and on November 8 Dr. Jones, who is surgeon in chief of Freedmen's, requested that we secure his services as a hospital administrative consultant, which I have arranged to do.

"It is expected that Mr. Mackenzie will commence his survey of Freedmen's Hospital on December 1, 1937."

Dexter Fellows Expires at 66; Famed Circus Press Agent

Typhoid Fever Fatal to Popular Advance Man of Big Top.

By the Associated Press.

Hattiesburg, Miss., Nov. 26.—Dexter W. Fellows, 66, the man who spent most of his life telling the world of the multiple attractions under the big top, died here tonight at 9:30 o'clock.

Fellows, who began visiting newspaper offices at the age of 21 with circus copy, was stricken with typhoid fever October 7, while preparing for a performance of the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey Circus here. He apparently was on the road to recovery when he suffered a setback a week ago. Physicians said a kidney ailment contributed to his death.

At his bedside was his wife, the former Signe Eugene von Brietholtz, whom he married in 1913.

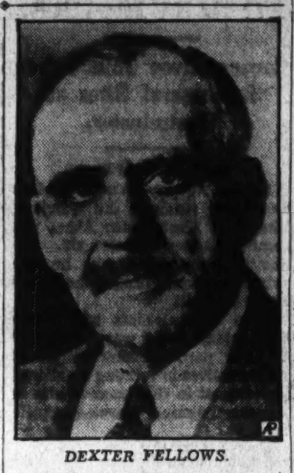
The Boston-born press agent had written more circus stories and probably knew more figures connected with the show business than any of his contemporaries.

He was always welcomed at newspaper offices. He was usually good for one or two side stories in addition to his sparkling "show copy," and had a rich store of tales picked up in his many years of pres-agenting, which he spun with a delightful knack.

Angular, mustached and possessor of a keen sense of humor, Fellows never tired of his long association with the circus to which he turned after failing at a half-dozen other callings.

His first press agent job was with Pawnee Bill's Wild West Show, followed by nine years spent building up Col. William F. Cody as "Buffalo Bill."

Fellows then abandoned the Wild West shows to cast his lot with Ringling Brothers and later with



DEXTER FELLOWS.

Barnum & Bailey, with whom he remained for a quarter of a century before rejoining Ringling Brothers after they had consolidated most of the big-time circuses.

Engaged in publicity work, he never sought headlines for himself, but few were the times he left town without seeing a story about himself printed alongside the circus account.

He was always willing to help a newspaperman and often went out of his way to dig up a new angle to give the reporters a fresh slant on a story.

However, the last request made of him by a newspaperman he had to turn down. While lying ill in the hospital a reporter visited him and asked permission to take a picture. "Let me beg off this time," Fellows said, with a friendly smile; "you see, I haven't shaved for nine days."

Hospital Aided By Revelations In Post, Is View

Articles on Gallinger Are Called Service, but Some Deplore Publicity.

By Gerald G. Gross

Disclosure by The Post of deplorable conditions at Gallinger Hospital is viewed with mixed feelings by members of the resident and visiting medical staffs.

"A splendid service to the community is being rendered by publication of the institution's need of additional space, renovation of existing buildings, more nurses, and laboratory expansion," said one private physician who is on service at Gallinger several days each week.

"The deficiencies which have been revealed truly exist, but I think they could best be corrected quietly and without exposure," said another.

Conditions Conceded.

"More harm than good will come of all this," according to one of the resident doctors, while another resident believes that "putting down in print the handicaps that burden the patient, the administrator, the physician and the nurse will help more than anything else to bring about improvement."

The more obvious shortcomings of Gallinger Hospital—space congestion resulting in overcrowding of wards and placing beds in corridors, the dilapidated condition of the children's ward, some of the tuberculosis buildings and doctors' quarters, etc.—are conceded by all sides. But differences crop out over such less tangible problems as administration of the institution.

Commenting yesterday upon the charge by one visiting physician that the hospital's administrative and medical staffs are in continual conflict with each other, the chief of one of the treatment departments said:

"In more than three years' association with Gallinger Hospital, during which time I have spent several hours there practically every day, I have had 100 per cent co-operation from the administrative staff. Naturally, since the institution is dependent upon public appropriations, I have not obtained everything I asked for—equipment, supplies, personnel, and so on—but there has never been occasion for a justifiable complaint.

Closing Doors Suggested.

With regard to overcrowding, one of the visiting doctors whose bills of complaint have been referred to Health Officer George C. Ruhland urges that study be given the feasibility of housing the overflow in private hospitals.

"It would seem to me," he said, that it would be desirable for the District of Columbia to admit a certain number of charity patients to the wards of the various private hospitals in Washington, thus taking advantage of the available space in these hospitals and relieving the congestion at Gallinger.

"As for expense, I wonder if these hospitals might not be willing to accept the city patients for a rather smaller rate than $4 a day."

Another physician on Gallinger's visiting staff favors a more drastic procedure to hasten a showdown on the space problem, which forces five beds to be placed in three-bed rooms, large wards to be crowded 50 per cent beyond normal capacity and many patients to be placed in drafty corridors.

"The way to get action," he told The Post, "is to shut the hospital's doors when maximum occupancy is reached. With the institution running at normal, comfortable capacity, patients can get efficient care, doctors need not rush over cases demanding careful attention, nurses can do a better job.

"Jamming the place simply results in no one receiving the attention to which he or she is entitled. Isn't it preferred to care for a smaller number properly than to try to handle too many patients with the result that everyone suffers, meaning the entire personnel as well as the patients?"

And from another doctor

"The social service needs of the hospital are taken care of by one social service worker who has, I believe, one part-time assistant. The present worker is very efficient and co-operative, but the amount of work that she has makes it utterly hopeless, as one can imagine.

"I am strongly of the opinion that an efficient social service department of minimum personnel would more than justify itself in decreasing the number of hospital days which many patients would have to remain. Such a department in a hospital like Gallinger supplies information which the family doctor has at his fingertips and which the staff can never obtain without them.

"Social service investigation will answer questions as to home life that will permit the early discharge of patients as well as building a background for their medical care."

(Another article on Gallinger Hospital will appear tomorrow.)

N. J., and Hines, who is from Savage, Md.

The charges were placed after a conference between Capt. Ira Keck and Assistant District Attorney Earl Kindleberger.

Dixon, who lives at 1522 Thirty-fourth street northwest, was dragged from his seat and beaten as the attackers had forced the bus to the side of the highway. It was the first time violence has been resorted to since the Greyhound drivers went on strike Wednesday midnight.

The attack occurred 20 minutes after the bus had left its downtown terminal at Fourteenth street and New York avenue on the 1:30 p. m. trip to Baltimore.

Dixon was driving east when, according to his story, two automobiles drove up and forced him to the curb at the 1200 block of New York avenue northeast.

Cry of "Scab!"

"Get out, you scab," shouted one, according to his story. Dixon said that after they had struck him on the face and head, the assailants climbed in their cars and sped eastward.

Dixon swung his bus around and took it back to the company's garage about a block away. There a new driver was obtained, and a guard placed on board. The passengers were taken to the Union Station, where they were placed on trains for their destination. His assailants wore Greyhound uniforms, Dixon said.

They soon spotted two cars containing 11 men, according to State Police Lieut. Andrew Conner, at Laurel sub-station. The group immediately was taken into custody.

The men wore tags which identified them as strikers from Philadelphia, L. C. Major, regional manager for the Greyhound, said. He added he was also familiar with the names of several, as they were phoned him from Laurel.

Two of the three cars involved in the attack, Dixon asserted, bore Pennsylvania license plates, and one of them District of Columbia tags.

As soon as the company learned of the attack, every Greyhound bus leaving the city carried a guard, who rode alongside the driver. The guard was unarmed, Major pointed out, and he was stationed by the driver not only to protect himself but to seize the wheel should another assault such as that on Dixon occur.

Passengers Put On Trains.

All passengers between Baltimore and New York are being sent by train, Major revealed.

Buses leaving Washington will go as far as Baltimore. The line is in operation through the South, and also to Scranton, Pa.

There was violence elsewhere in the East. In Syracuse, N. Y., the tire of a bus was slashed. Five Boston men were arrested in connection with a midnight attack on a New York-bound Greyhound. In Cleveland, the Associated Press reported, two strikers were arraigned on charges of tampering with a bus and disorderly conduct.

Meanwhile Federal Labor Conciliator John L. Conner moved to arrange a joint conference, "possibly for today," in an effort to settle the controversy over a closed shop and mileage rate wage increases. Eight Greyhound lines east of the Mississippi are involved.

Estimating 1,300 drivers were involved, S. R. Harvey, assistant president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, reiterated that the strike had resulted in "nearly 100 per cent suspension of service."

From Richmond late last night came the announcement by J. H. Darlington, superintendent of the Greyhound lines there, that five buses running on extra schedules to Washington had been discontinued.

Darlington added, according to the Associated Press, that the buses were withdrawn because of the seasonal decline in passenger traffic and not because of the strike.

Congressman Sets Service High; Finds Constituent's Dog

Under the head of service to constituents, the office of Representative Norman R. Hamilton (Democrat), of Virginia, yesterday saw that a lost blind dog got safely home to Virginia.

In fact, Hamilton's secretary personally escorted the waif to a Washington-Norfolk boat and saw it safely aboard. It was consigned to its owner, Charles A. Mowry, of Virginia Beach, Va.

Thieves stole Mowry's automobile in Charlottesville, Va., with the blind dog inside. The car was recovered in Baltimore, but the dog was missing.

Then a newspaper advertisement was answered by a Mount Rainier, Md., man. He had found the dog wandering near his home.

Information.

One of this column's contributors, Robert S. Cramer, visited the United States Information Service, emerging with the appended thoughts:

"Ensconced in unpretentious quarters in the Commercial National Bank Building at the corner of Fourteenth and G is a tiny governmental agency that enables you to learn anything about the Government you don't already know. The United States Information Service, to be sure, has not been much heralded, yet it plays a busy part in the scheme of Government.

"Its sole purpose is to answer questions. From morning to night, the Government workers there are engaged in answering telephones, pounding typewriters and talking to you personally. In short, they are carrying out Uncle Sam's orders to let you know about him.

"From all over the country pours a constant stream of queries. Usually, the intake is 100 letters a day. In addition, the telephones bring in at least 70 inquiries, and 30 personal callers appear daily. The job of the Information Service is to answer these numerous questions, which range in character from the trivial to the most profound.

"To answer these queries, the Information Service keeps extensive references in governmental charts, indices and files. It maintains a file of Congressional information in general, including bills, public laws and committee reports. Also on file are President Roosevelt's executive orders, which are certainly not small in number. In the room, devoted expressly to Congressional and Supreme Court matter, are securely bound copies of the Congressional Record and Federal Register for the public's edification. Incidentally, the service is as free to you as the air.

"Really technical questions have to be sent to respective governmental departments and bureaus to be answered there. For instance, were a farmer to write in asking about the prospects of his cotton crop, the service, lacking pertinent information, would probably forward the inquiry to a bureau in the Department of Agriculture, which is in a better position to answer it. The Agriculture Department would investigate, then mail the man a reply.

"In a sense the Information Service is a co-ordinating agent among the various governmental units. It does a multitude of things for the departments and divisions, such as locating individuals, unearthing specific facts, establishing correspondence and so on. Because of its abundant information the service acts like a connecting link between the visitor to Washington and his Government, and in that respect its operations have conduced to a greater degree of harmony and cooperation.

"Composed of a staff of only 15, the service performs an incredibly large amount of work. Queries come in from all the States, the United States possessions and foreign nations, to boot. Even sailors on American warships in far-off ports have sent in questions. According to Harriet Root, chief of the service, her office even makes appointments for visitors, including foreign travelers, who are desirous of meeting certain governmental officials.

"Congressmen and Washington newspaper correspondents are avid users of the Information Service. They realize that the service can handle virtually any governmental question. One will want to know the name of the HOLC head in Nebraska. He calls the service, and before he can say Alexandrine Georgeopolus the bureau will have for him the HOLC man's address, and his telephone number as well. And amazingly accurate is the information disseminated by this organization. Their figures are those of the expert Government bureaus and have been checked and rechecked."

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Losing a Cold Slam.

The enormous bonus accruing to the successful bidder of slams, particularly vulnerable slams, should certainly dictate unusual caution in the play of such hands by declarer. When the winning line of play is just too much for the poor declarer—when a complicated squeeze or coup is required that demands technique beyond his experience—it is, of course, not his fault; he is to be commiserated with rather than blamed. But when the only requisite to succeed is ordinary garden variety care, surely there is no excuse for failure. In the hand shown below the success of the slam was assured from the very first trick. Declarer had to go to some pains to throw the contract out of the proverbial window.

South, dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ 7 6 ♡ 5 4 ◇ 10 8 6 ♣ A J 10 5 3 2
♠ 9 3 ♡ 8 7 6 ◇ K J 5 2 ♣ Q 8 6 4	North West East South	♠ K J 5 4 2 ♡ 10 ◇ Q 9 7 4 3 ♣ K 7
	♠ A Q 10 8 ♡ A K Q J 9 3 2 ◇ A ♣ 9

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♡	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

West selected an unfortunate opening—that is, unfortunate from his point of view, namely the spade nine. East went up with the King, and declarer won. Now, obviously, since the spade nine had made "equals" of declarer's ten and eight, trumps could have been drawn and the hand laid down, merely by the concession of a spade trick.

Declarer, however, either was blinded to the fact, or had some vague idea of making an extra trick. At any rate, after winning with the spade Ace he laid down the Queen, then led a third spade with the obvious intention of ruffing in dummy. West "beat him to it" by ruffing in with the heart six. After that declarer's contract was in the limbo of lost hopes. West returned a trump, but still had one left with which to prevent the ruffing of declarer's losing spade in dummy.

Hobson's Choice In Russia.

That familiar injunction found on American ballots—vote for one—will constitute an entirely superfluous bit of advice to Russian voters when they go to the polls on December 12.

Russia's long-heralded election will be "secret." That is, voters in the Soviet Union will have the unaccustomed privilege of being able to mark their ballots with no prying eyes looking over their shoulders. Thus democracy marches on in the land of Stalin.

Yet it is not necessary to be the seventh son of a seventh son to predict with remarkable accuracy what the results of the balloting will be. In all but a negligible handful of the Soviet union's 1,143 districts there will be only one candidate. Thus the choice before the voters will be, not as between opposing candidates but as between voting in the affirmative and neglecting to mark their ballots at all.

This circumstance is being hailed by government spokesmen as further proof of the superiority of "Soviet democracy" over the systems obtaining in capitalist lands.

"If in our country," said Mikhail Kalinin in a speech at Leningrad, "in a number of places candidates withdrew their names for the benefit of some candidate, it is a result of their social kinship and common political purposes. Tens and hundreds of thousands of electors after considerable discussion have agreed on one candidate. It is a sign of socialism—a sign of the impossibility of differences among the working masses such as there are in bourgeois society."

It would be pleasant to accept this explanation. But it does not remove the suspicion that the lack of opposition candidates may be simply the result of fear that to run for office as an opponent of any who have the blessings of the regime is to place one's life in jeopardy as a Trotzkyist-spy-saboteur-wrecker. The unceasing purges that have been going on in the Soviet paradise over a period of many months have brought home to many the wisdom of the old adage that discretion is the better part of valor.

Premier Chautemps' Victory.

The winds of dissension raging in and around the French Popular Front during recent months have led many to predict the speedy collapse of the coalition which has ruled France since June, 1936. But such predictions have now been shown to be unwarranted.

Proof of this is found in the 518-to-6 vote of confidence secured by Premier Chautemps from the Chamber of Deputies Friday morning. Such unanimity rarely occurs in French politics, except in time of war. It is all the more striking that it was manifested on a question which deeply divides the parties, namely, whether the salaries of government employes should be raised to meet the increased cost of living.

To this plea the Chautemps regime has been sympathetic and it indicated its readiness to do all it can for the workers in government bureaus. But to meet their demands in full would, it was felt, tend to unbalance a budget which has only tentatively and precariously been balanced through Finance Minister Bonnet's able and courageous efforts.

The dilemma is not a new one for the French. But when the test came practically all parties from the moderate right up to and including the Communists on the extreme left sided with the government. The issue, as Premier Chautemps told the Chamber, had ceased to be a financial one and had become a political question.

Because of that the Communists, while hostile at first, ultimately withdrew their opposition. Clearly no party within the Popular Front has any desire to see that coalition disrupted. And, at the same time, the sane program of financial and economic rehabilitation pursued by the Chautemps regime, plus a modification of the more unworkable reforms put through Parliament by the Blum government, has won over the moderate right.

For the time being, therefore, France is more solidly united than it has been in a long time, a circumstance which is certain to have a favorable bearing on the European situation. With France weak, the forces of disruption would be in a position to play ducks and drakes with the peace of Europe. Conversely, a strong, united France is a stabilizing element of vast importance.

The New Recovery Program.

The country has many reasons to be encouraged by the response of the Administration to the current recession in business and employment. Instead of continuing the assumption that prosperity has been restored, President Roosevelt is taking important steps to reverse the downward trend. That attitude notably strengthens the hope that this industrial setback will be shortlived.

When the President sent his message to Congress at the opening of the extra session he recognized the need of some action to relieve tax-burdened private enterprise. Now he is actively sponsoring measures to encourage business and thus prevent a serious increase in unemployment. Apparently, the President does not intend to let past controversies stand in the way of effective co-operation in meeting this emergency. If that attitude is consistently maintained, it may be more important than any single recovery measure which the present Congress is likely to enact.

Congressmen who attempted to shift to the President responsibility for any delay in tax-relief legislation may claim credit for clarification of Mr. Roosevelt's attitude. Apparently he desires revision of burdensome and arbitrary taxes as soon as Congress is ready to act. A challenge is thus thrown back to the Ways and Means Committee. The President's position would be stronger if he had asked the Treasury to work out desirable changes in the levies on undistributed profits and capital gains. But even without such guidance the Ways and Means Committee cannot afford to ignore the Chief Executive's invitation to prompt action.

The President's point against undue haste and undigested legislation is well taken. But it is not a question of rewriting complicated revenue laws. Most of the desired changes can be effected by simply modifying existing rates. If the President had been more prompt in inaugurating such changes, the task might now be well under way.

Even more significant than this go-ahead signal on tax relief is the housing program sponsored by the President. Forecasts of the message that will go to Congress on Monday arouse hope of broad-gauge legislation to encourage much-needed construction through private enterprise and with the aid of private capital. And these efforts are supplemented by what appears to be a conscientious attempt to iron out differences with the power industry so that delayed capital improvements may go forward.

It is especially significant that each of these recovery moves is based upon the revival or stimulation of private enterprise. Pump-priming seems to have been relegated very much to the background. Department heads will be asked to speed up purchases contemplated during the next seven months. But that will not involve a new drain upon the Treasury. Fortunately, the current trend is in the opposite direction, as indicated by the President's move to curtail Federal aid for highway construction.

If these efforts to encourage industrial and construction activities succeed, they will constitute a much more secure foundation for lasting recovery than Government spending. In a very real sense they constitute a constructive program. Whether or not they also signify a lasting change in Administration policy, they certainly indicate a willingness on the President's part to meet new situations realistically.

There can be only one reasonable response to this attitude on the part of business and that is wholehearted co-operation. Enthusiastic support for the President's commendable efforts to arrest the slump before it becomes more serious would perhaps do more than anything else to solidify current trends into permanent policy.

Controlling Speed.

As a new approach to the dilemma of fast driving, Traffic Director Van Duzer has suggested installing speed governors on the automobiles of certain offenders. Motorists thus disciplined would be forbidden to drive any car not so controlled. In this way they could be limited to 30 miles per hour or any other speed that might seem desirable.

Speed governors should be especially useful in the case of habitually reckless drivers. Recently a local motorist was discovered to have been arrested 17 times for speeding within the past ten years. Revocation of permits for 60 or 90 days has little effect on persons of this sort. They are accustomed to fast driving, and as soon as they are allowed back on the road they begin again. Perhaps a few months in cars that could make only 30 miles an hour would change their habits.

So far as is known, speed governors have never been tried as public safety devices. They have had a limited private sale and a few bus and truck companies are known to have installed them on their fleets. One objection raised against them is that they can be dangerous when a driver finds himself without quick pick-up power in an emergency. An answer to this may be found in the fact that when governors were fitted on 20,000 CCC trucks, the corps' traffic accident rate dropped 50 per cent.

If the use of speed governors should be approved by the Traffic Bureau, their cost could doubtless be assessed against offenders requiring them. Such a policy would entail only a slight amendment to the traffic code.

A few of these devices, for experimental purposes, might prove a worthwhile investment for the District. But it is not to be supposed that they will ever become a substitute for rigorous law enforcement, including the revocation of permits in flagrant cases.

Benefits For The Unemployed.

At present Wisconsin is the only State paying unemployment insurance benefits. By next January, however, 21 States and the District of Columbia will begin to make such payments under local laws complying with the requirements of the Social Security Board. At brief but irregular intervals thereafter the rest of the States as well as Alaska and Hawaii will be added to the list and we shall have Nation-wide coverage of insured workers.

While the unemployment insurance laws of the several States differ in many respects, they are alike in a number of important features. All States, for example, provide that a person must be able and willing to work in order to qualify for benefits. To be eligible he must also have had a certain amount of regular employment in the immediate past. All benefits have to be paid through public employment offices or agencies approved by the Social Security Board. And in most States a waiting period of from two to three weeks is required before benefits can be claimed.

It would be futile to try to estimate the probable number of persons who will become insurance beneficiaries during the coming year, as that will depend upon various incalculable factors. Since benefits are confined to those who have previously had regular employment for some time, persons now on relief will in all but a very few cases be excluded. The insurance payments will not, therefore, officially diminish the present relief load. But they will keep many individuals who may lose their jobs hereafter from becoming public charges.

Systematic provision against the hazards of unemployment can never obviate the need of relief for unemployables, nor will it bridge over excessive and prolonged joblessness in periods of extreme business depression. It can and should, however, do much to lighten the relief load, and to maintain the morale of the unemployed by tiding them over temporary periods of enforced idleness. The benefit payments, moreover, help to sustain workers' buying power in bad times and thus to cushion the shock of a general business recession.

With various proposals now being seriously urged to invest unemployment and old-age insurance reserves in low-cost housing or other enterprises, it is very important to understand why these so-called reserves are not available for such purposes. The unemployment trust fund, which is now held by the United States Treasury for account of the States, amounts to approximately $500,000,000 at the present time. That fund was created by the transfer of contributions made to the States by employers, and in some cases by employes, as required under the terms of the social security act. The Federal Government, however, does not possess any cash hoards specifically earmarked for payment of unemployment insurance. On the contrary, it has used the half billion dollars turned over to it to defray current expenditures of the Government. The trust fund simply holds Government promises to pay.

As the States begin to draw upon the Treasury to meet demands for unemployment benefits, cash will have to be provided either out of general funds or by sales of Government obligations to the public. In short, the Treasury will find itself deprived of some of the cash from pay-roll taxes which has enabled it to incur budgetary deficits without increasing the volume of debt in the hands of the public by an equal amount.

The administrative complexities and the financial intricacies of social insurance legislation are undoubtedly great. With business on the down grade and unemployment increasing, the system may well be subjected to a quite severe test at the very start. Fortunately the Social Security Board has at all times expressed its willingness to modify its own policies and to recommend revision of the law if experience should demonstrate the advisability of changes.

In a Western State, a woman killed her husband because he refused to buy her a fur coat, and a jury—composed entirely of men, mind you—convicted her of murder! Has chivalry forever vanished from the face of the earth?

Mr. Farley Misdirects A Letter.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A amusing incident was created when Postmaster General Farley wrote a bread-and-butter letter to a sheriff in the Grand Coulee Dam country and thoughtlessly addressed it to "Wenatchee, Wis." Sheriff Tom Cannon got the letter in Wenatchee, Wash., where he lives, and extracted his quota of amusement from it. "I wonder where Mr. Farley thinks the Grand Coulee Dam is situated," he wisecracked. And as to Farley's line about "a real pleasure to meet you on my recent trip to Wisconsin," the genial sheriff responded, "I bet it was."

We cannot let the incident pass merely as a humorous trifle in the news, however. Always seeking the inner meanings and the significant underlying factors of things, we probe this little happening to its roots and come up with a profound moral and politico-scientific lesson: that the superiority of civil service over the spoils system has been proved again. Mr. Farley, who misdirected the letter, or dictated its misdirection, is a political appointee. An unidentified postal clerk, who straightened out the address and got the letter safely to its intended destination, is a civil service employe. Verb sap.

Socialized Medicine.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent attitude of certain members of the American Medical Association would lead us to believe that many doctors are actually enemies of the humanity they profess to cure. The racketeer who stands by your side with a gun and demands a ransom to protect your life is no less a criminal than the doctor who either demands an exorbitant fee for his services or refuses to treat certain citizens at all unless they are able to pay his price.

It is significant that the A. M. A. has always been dominated by this same type of conservative and well-to-do (financially) intellect. Against the reaction of the conservative A. M. A. the average citizen has only one effective weapon—socialized medicine.

Assuming that the average doctor spends a lot of money for his education, we also assume that the average doctor was not forced into this profession at the point of a bayonet—he (or she) followed the profession because it was one of his choice, knowing that it was a business of mending warped and broken bodies of his fellowmen and women.

Is it just for a doctor to charge the average citizen exorbitant fees for wrapping a piece of inner-tube around his arm, blowing it up and jotting a number down, hitting the said citizen with a rubber hammer willy-nilly about his anatomy, making said citizen say "ah" in various absurd positions, giving said citizen a prescription for some patent medicine worth a few cents at the country store, but costing several dollars because of a magic slip of paper in the city, and then telling said citizen that all he needed was plenty of good food, rest and pleasant working conditions?

Socialized medicine means health for the people—all the people—not just the people who can afford to spend the winter in Florida and their summers at Bar Harbor. Socialized medicine means health and happiness for millions of citizens who wait eternally in inadequate clinics for relief.

Cab Driver On Tipping.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read your editorial on the minimum wage problem(?) with a great deal of interest. It is evident that the members of the minimum wage board are either people who don't tip, or are people who tip but don't have intelligence enough to know why they do tip.

I am a cab driver. I have been one for 27 years and I think I can tell them why thinking people tip. Not only am I a cab driver, I am also a frequent cab rider. I also eat all of my meals in lunchrooms.

I, therefore, think that I can see the problems—that you call the tipping evil—from all angles.

In the first place local people—the majority of them are too cheap to tip, but the few that do tip—do so to help the one whom they give the tip—the employe, not the owner of the business. They do this because they know that the owner of the business is, in most instances, a chiseler who does not pay a living wage to his employes. That is why I tip when I get table service in a lunchroom, or ride in a taxicab. It is also the reason which impels other thinking people to tip.

Therefore, the Minimum Wage Board, in fixing a minimum wage, has no right to consider tips a factor in determining the amount the owner of a business should pay.

Treatment Of Shoplifters.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Visitors here, I understand, are stealing "numerous articles" from department stores to be turned loose by our police judge because "forced to violate the law in order to live."

Just where the law authorizes a judge to turn loose shoplifters and thieves without even taking their promises (bonds) to stop stealing I have not been able to find, but I assume that's just a part of taking from the "haves" and giving it to the "have-nots." P. AMES.

Powerful Books.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Edmond Fontaine criticizes Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's selection of "powerful books" before the Book Fair audience, in New York, by calling attention to The Post of November 21 to the omission of Henry George's "Progress and Poverty" and the supposed omission of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and the Bible.

He is in error in regard to the two last named. I have a mimeographed copy of the much-discussed address before me, sent at my request by the Secretary of Agriculture. I suggest that Edmond Fontaine and other book lovers write him for it.

On page 8, Mr. Wallace says: "'Uncle Tom's Cabin' undoubtedly had a powerful effect." Mr. Fontaine says: "'Uncle Tom's Cabin' caused more suffering, death and destruction than any book printed in America." Let me correct that error. It was not the book which caused the suffering, death and destruction, but the institution of unpaid labor. The book graphically dramatized the injustice of this and paved the way for the millions of colored people to have the happiness of freedom, by appealing to men's hearts.

On page 2 Secretary Wallace says: "Undoubtedly the most powerful book of all the ages is the Bible. It has caused the shedding of millions of gallons of blood and has soothed hundreds of millions of aching hearts."

Secretary Wallace omitted Thomas Buckle's "Introduction to Civilization," Edward Bellamy's "Looking Backward," "Robinson Crusoe," "Lost Horizon" and Jack London's "Iron Heel" which I would have listed.

If people would read more good books of the past instead of the trashy stuff of the hour, they would enlarge their understanding of life. Certainly "the pen is mightier than the sword" and books make history no less than armies.

Lincoln Story.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read many stories about Mr. Roosevelt but today I read the following about Mr. Lincoln and I couldn't help thinking how well it applies to Mr. Roosevelt. I inclose it. M. I. G.
Washington, Nov. 16.

[Inclosure.]

Some gentlemen from the West were excited and troubled about the commissions or omissions of the Administration. President Lincoln heard them patiently and then replied:

"Gentlemen, supposing all the property you were worth was in gold, and you had put it in the hands of Blondin to carry across the Niagara River on a rope; would you shake the cable, or keep shouting out to him—Blondin, stand up a little straighter—Blondin stoop a little more—go a little faster—lean a little more to the North—lean a little more to the South? No, you would hold your breath as well as your tongue, and keep your hands off until he was safe over. The Government is carrying an immense weight. Untold treasures are in our hands. We are doing the very best we can. Don't badger us; keep silence and we'll get you safe across."

Popular Vote On War.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just been reading in the paper about some of our bright Senators and Representatives who would pass a law leaving war to a vote of the people, which, of course, would take some time, and we might get whipped before we started. Since our Senators and Representatives are so dumb, what could we expect from the masses of ordinary people, who aren't supposed to be so bright as our lawmakers and who would do the voting? L. BRAULEY.

"Motor-Bodied?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: These remarks have nothing to do with the group medical discussion going on in your columns, but are suggested by it.

What has become of the old-time physician that used to advise "patients" suffering from an overdose of motor car to walk four or five miles each day? Not just for the welfare of their internal economy, if under par, but for maintenance of proper physical balance, if not ailing? Has the old-timer gone the way of the great auk? Does he refrain from issuing sane advice because of disinclination to deal out tips he knows the "impatients" won't follow? Or because he suffers from need of such advice himself?

In Washington, where only a small percentage live what might be called something close to a natural life, the pill and "morning after" potion are king. The great sedentary army is recruited from drivers and cargo of 190,000 motor cars! Such is their torpor, few will walk even a block to lay in those gigantic stocks of groceries deemed essential to allay the rigors of driving! They take the "cah" and park like their chins—double.

No wonder more hospitals are needed, that so many pop off prematurely from needless ailments. Athletes, after brief furious competition, quit when they should be starting; are unrecognizable a few years later because of overweight, aldermanic bay windows and superfluous chins. Wheezy wrecks fit only for soft easy "sitting-down" jobs and to ride eternally in cars. I know dozens of 'em!

The durable old-timers still extant didn't get that way from this sort of life, glorified(!) by the motor age. Noticeable to anyone who has bicycled or mooched afoot in Europe is the soundness and vigor of the middle-aged, not to mention plenty of old boys in the 70s. The superficial are sometimes fooled because their pants are not pressed!

"What America Needs" is more of the old-fashioned advice to make more of us that way. As one who is and hopes to stay "that way," I'd say: Tell the motor-minded, docs, that they are getting motor-bodied.

Government Management.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For the last several years, we have been fed on the new and novel theory that only politicians are princes of purity and hence fit to direct, govern and plan for the American people.

Certain local civic groups have apparently been affected by this propaganda and, as a result, are clamoring for the Government to "take over" the streetcar systems.

Those of us who are blessed with memory have not forgotten what transpired during the war, when our systems of transportation were not only mismanaged, but all but wrecked when the Government attempted to run everything.

As it is, the people of Washington are at the mercy of the politicians, being denied the ballot, and thinking, unemotional citizens are not in favor of our streetcar systems being "Russianized."

After The Years.

Statistics released in Washington on the tenth anniversary of American commercial flying give an impressive picture of the progress in this field since 1927. The number of passengers carried has increased more than 150 times—from 8,679 to the former year to an estimated total of 1,375,000 for this year.

On the other side of the ledger are some 3,600 persons who have been killed, although only 340 of this number are charged against commercial flying. The deaths from spectacular air crashes have doubtless made an exaggerated impression on the public mind in regard to the dangers still present in flying, but each new technical improvement should make the number smaller. The record for the first ten years is very highly significant and points to a brilliant future for commercial aviation.

Burning Leaves.

IN THE FALL we would gather in the vacant lot behind Joe McDonough's and organize a team.

There were 12 of us. Joe was captain because he was strongest. He was 13 and tall for his age, and he ruled the team in the best dictatorial manner.

It was Joe who decided who should be on the Varsity. There could be only 11 players on the Varsity team, and we would work our heart out to win a place on the team. It was no fun to be the lone scrub.

We would practice every afternoon from the time we got out of school until dark, and then we would sit around in the dusk, and Joe would tell us what we had done wrong.

He was a born leader with a lot of Irish wit and a dangerous temper lurking in his laughing brown eyes.

There were really only ten places to be filled on the team because nobody ever dared question Joe's right to be quarterback.

* * * *

Toward the end of September Joe would tell us that he had seen enough to know who would be on the Varsity. We would sit around in a circle, and Joe would walk back and forth in front of us and call our names off one by one and tell us what position we would play.

When he called my name and told me I was to play end I swelled up inside with pride until I thought I would burst. I didn't even hear the rest of the names as he called them out, and it was not until he had finished calling the names that I looked around and saw that Dave Smith had been left off the team.

The rest of the fellows were congratulating each other and bragging about what we would do when we played the Ashby Street Lions, but Dave Smith didn't say anything; he just sat there quietly, and I felt sorry for him.

I guess we all knew that Dave wouldn't make the team because he wore glasses and couldn't see very well when he took them off to play.

But he had worked harder than anyone else to get on the team, and now he had failed. I went over and sat beside him and told him that his was the most important position of all because he was the whole scrub team and had to be able to fill the place of any man on the team who got hurt.

But after that Dave sat on the sidelines while we ran through our plays and the rest of us forgot he was there. But he never failed to show up for practice in the vacant lot, and he was there early on the day of our big game with the Ashby Street Lions.

* * * *

Our teams were evenly matched even though the Lions outweighed us ten pounds to the man. The fact that the Lions had only nine men on their team made up for the difference in weight.

There never has been a harder-fought game. At the end of the half we were a pretty bruised lot, and neither side had been able to score.

Joe talked to us between the halves and told us we were putting up a good fight, but he didn't think we were doing our best.

"Fellas," he said, "when we go back out there I'm going to take that ball, and we're going down that field for a touchdown."

We went back on the field, and we fed Joe the ball, and he put his head down and pounded the line but when the last quarter began we still hadn't scored.

But when we lined up for the last 15 minutes of play one of the Lions made a mistake.

"You're a bunch of sissies," he jeered, "because you even have guys on your team that wear glasses."

He had noticed Dave Smith sitting on the sidelines waiting to play and he made a mistake talking about Dave because it made Joe McDonough mad.

He didn't say anything, but on the next play he took the ball and ran right through the Ashby Street Lions for a touchdown.

There wasn't much more to the game.

* * * *

Joe was the one who decided we would celebrate the victory that night with a bonfire.

"We'll meet here," he said, "after dark and we'll build a fire with dead leaves that'll be the biggest bonfire this town ever saw."

We all went out to the lot after dark, and some of the fellows brought their girls along to help celebrate.

Joe was there first, and he had raked together a mountain of leaves, and when we were all there he touched a match to the pile.

We gathered close to the fire, and the flames lit up the faces of the boys and girls there, and it was a sight I will never forget.

We were all pretty happy about winning the game, and we were proud because we knew the girls there thought we were heroes.

Then Joe McDonough got up and made a speech about the afternoon's game.

"I just want to say," he told us, "that you all played a swell game, but no body had a bigger part in winning that game than Dave Smith."

I was glad that Joe had said that.

We sat around quite a while after that talking and watching the fire, with the smoke from the burning leaves blowing into our faces.

I have never forgotten that night. I think of it every year when leaves burn in the fall.

"Little Willie breathing normally.

"Willie is the 12-year-old son of a Negro woman with whom he lives at the Miami Beach home of which she is caretaker.

"Last Saturday Willie boarded a streetcar in Miami Beach to visit his aunt in the Miami Negro section.

"Then a police patrol drove alongside.

"'Boy,' said one of the two policemen, 'how fast can you get to Niggertown?

"'Pretty fast, I guess,' stuttered Willie.

"'Get going,' was the next order.

"Willie began to run, while the police car and guffawing policemen trailed him all the way."

FOR ABOUT ten years Miami and Miami Beach and the little municipal excrescence called Hialeah, adjoining Miami, have extended a welcome to the more prosperous and notorious racketeers of the big Northern cities. In some years the welcome has been less cordial than in others, and there have been seasons when, owing to disagreement between rival political groups, gambling house operators and slot machine magnates have either been suppressed or compelled to do business on the sneak.

However, there has never been an hour's play in any gambling house in the region which was not licensed, through the graft system, by one or other of the local authorities and with the tolerance of local public opinion, which felt that it was necessary to sell these privileges lest the heavy spenders be diverted to Cuba or other places. During all this time any ordinary harness cop with a sheaf of police pictures could have picked up a daily catch of well known police characters at the race track or night clubs, and any prosecutor with a disposition to bear down could have closed any resort where gambling was conducted or criminals congregated.

After the Ku Klux Klan had kicked in the night club on a recent night the sheriff was quoted as saying that the place was a menace, but was not quoted as explaining why, in that case, he did not close it himself by legal means. The fact is, of course, that the gambling, slot machine and night club industries have been tied together by a natural community of interest and that the whole group of them were tied to successive local government bodies by a practical understanding and other considerations.

MOREOVER, the newspapers, in their zeal to promote spending and local business, condoned this system except in moments of political frenzy. The widespread newspaper practice of covering the social and theatrical phase of night life and ignoring the known corrupt and criminal background was nowhere more apparent than in Miami.

Not only in Miami but in most sizable cities a new phase of journalism ballyhoos the excitement, music and entertainment and the personalities found in night clubs operated or frequented by the underworld but purposely omits mention of other knowledge which any good police reporter would place on top. Well-known newspaper diarists of the night side have been known to write the most sentimental tributes to men whom they knew to be criminal racketeers, and the names of famous theatrical and musical personalities have been used to advertise places which were known to be dumps.

There is something pathetic about a community in which vigilantes wearing the mask of the burglar to conceal their identity, for the same reason that the burglar conceals his, kick in a joint which the sheriff describes as a menace while "guffawing cops" in a patrol car are busy chasing a terrified 12-year-old Negro child through the streets. And the Miami Herald's jocose treatment of the boy's fear and the huge mirth of the two policemen in itself would be marred by any elaboration.

Letters From China

Missionaries Describe Effects Of Japan's Invasion.

Kinhwa.

The Japanese bombing planes have visited almost every part of the country along the coast lines. At last they paid Kinhwa a visit last Sunday (Kinhwa is 200 miles inland). They came about 9 o'clock in the morning, while I was making rounds in the wards. First they were in groups of three and after a few minutes they spread out in single file and began to whirl above the city. Suddenly we heard the noise of a bomb which shook the whole city; then another one and again the third, and fourth and fifth and sixth. All bombs fell within five minutes.

The hospital wards were thrown into confusion. Nurses were scared blue; patients were running in all directions. With most of the workers gone to church, Ruth and I tried to calm the situation the best we could, and at the same time direct the patients who could walk to hide in the cellar beneath the operating room, where the cement floor ought to resist the bombs better than the other places in the hospital.

Before we finished our duty, the telephone rang, asking us to send doctors and nurses to the railroad station to do first-aid work. Mr. Yu and a few of the nurses went. In the meantime wounded ones were brought to the hospital, one after another. Some with arms lacerated, others with feet hanging on strips of skin swinging and dripping blood as they came along, still others with head, neck or face badly lacerated.

Three kiddies were carried in the hospital following the others. One with her chest blown open and the lung sticking out of the chest wall. A second with one foot badly torn and injury on the head; a third with two big lacerations on the back. All were brothers and sisters in one family. The oldest was 12 years of age and the youngest one 6. Both parents were killed. The three poor kids died soon after they were brought into the hospital, although we operated on the one that had most hope.

The bombing killed about 40 of the Kinhwa people. All were ordinary people, without arms or protection. Five or six of the bombs dropped in the vicinity of the railway station, but none hit the station proper.

DR. L. P. LIANG.

Canton.

Early in the afternoon of September 22 in broad daylight, Japanese planes dropped six bombs on a residential area, killing not less than 300 persons, mostly women and children.

We arrived at the scene of the bombing within 20 minutes after the explosion. The "all clear" signal had not yet been given, but the disaster was evidently so great that at every turn police and soldiers had to facilitate our passage through the otherwise closed streets. The smoke and dust of the explosion had not yet cleared away, and the road for some distance was heavily piled with twisted timbers, broken glass, bricks, plaster, and all manner of building material. As we approached the scene of the bombing, police and soldiers on every side were calling and beckoning us to the place where wounded lay.

As soon as it became evident that a rescue party had arrived, there came from every corner and hole in the debris, which had but a few moments before been living quarters, the most wretched and pitiable pieces of humanity that can be imagined. Some were seen with blood dripping off their faces, crawling over the demolished buildings, calling loudly to their loved ones, who were buried under the falling structures.

One old woman, past 80 years of age, holding her bleeding head, called to us urgently to rescue her children and grandchildren who were buried in the mess beside her. Numerous children were running about in a semidazed way, trying to find mothers who could be seen nowhere.

One man, badly cut about the head and face, came out of a little hole where a bit of flooring from the upper story had formed a triangle with the wall and floor below, carrying a little girl about 10 years old. He pleaded with us to bring him back in the first load. His wife, two smaller children, and mother were buried under the houses, and he seemed terribly fearful lest something would happen to separate his only living child from him.

The story might be continued almost indefinitely, for the sights of those few moments, while we were filling the hospital cars with wounded, were many indeed. We were but one of six hospitals which went to the rescue. Between groans of pain some were mourning for lost members of the family. Others, whose families could be accounted for, had lost all of their worldly possessions. Where would they be able to pass the nights after they left the hospitals? Where could they get food?

The scenes of human pain and woe are almost innumerable and defy description. The people who were bombed were not living near a military camp, arsenal, important railroad or any kind of military defense works. They lived on one of the busy streets of this section of Canton, and yet the pitiless eye of the invader regarded not men. His was but a program of ruthless destruction and terror.

DR. F. E. BATES.

Hangchow.

Monday afternoon we really had an exhibition out here. Five planes came over the hills from the west flying high and in a line. As they came over our campus they made a nose dive toward the pagoda. The sound was terrible. They growled like mad dogs. Each dropped his bomb on Zahkow freight yards and then rose and circled across the river. It was a perfect exhibition.

As soon as it was over I rushed down to see what damage had been done. Three fell on the railroad and two on piles of wood behind the freight depot and on the river bank. The alarm came at 3 o'clock. It was over at 10 minutes past 4. I got down there before 4:30 and the holes were already filled and tracks that had been torn up and rails that had been twisted had been removed and new ones already laid. Before 5 o'clock I saw a freight train crossing these tracks. This is characteristic of the way the damage to tracks, etc., is being repaired. Crews often start these repairs before the "all clear" signal is given. The spirit is fine.

Dud Near Nanking.

So far as I can learn not a single soldier or a single piece of military equipment has been destroyed by the 50 bombs dropped in and around Hangchow City—I am not speaking of the aviation field at Chien Chiao. Three baby ones were dropped on dear old West Lake yesterday, it is stated. This is the second time fishermen on West Lake have been bombed. Once a group of farmers cutting rice near us was bombed. These are not isolated cases, I believe.

In spite of all these distractions we are getting along pretty well. Classes are meeting and we are trying to keep as nearly a normal schedule as possible. We have 520 students, almost exactly 75 per cent of the 700 we had hoped to have this term, had conditions been normal. We have three "reserve periods" at night, beginning at 7 o'clock, which will be used to make up any work lost during the day because of alarms or raids.

I haven't told you the experience of a teacher in our chemistry department and his wife. They were coming to Hangchow last Sunday morning. When their train was nearing Dzang An three planes were seen coming. The train stopped and all on board beat it, some hiding in bamboo groves, others in the tall rice in the field. The planes bombed the train, one bomb making a direct hit and destroying two cars. Five other bombs fell in the fields where the people were hiding and machine guns were also brought into play and sprayed the people in the fields. Quite a number were killed and wounded in this attack. The planes then flew away and the people began to come from cover and rush to protect their baggage, when lo, the planes suddenly came back and dropped three more bombs on the people and again sprayed them with machine-gun fire. One report has it that some 30 were killed and nearly twice that number wounded.

R. J. M.

Soochow.

According to past wars, Soochow is just back of the war line, but according to the present war we are in the midst of it. Off and on all during the day Japanese planes come to visit us and drop death and destruction on our innocent people. Every time a raid is over, fresh patients are brought into refugee hospitals and mission hospitals for treatment. It makes the heart sick.

More than 100,000 refugees have already passed through Soochow, while several thousand are being cared for now. More than 200,000 more are expected if the war continues. These large numbers mean very little. One has to see the doctor giving blood transfusion to a little girl both of whose arms were blown off by a bomb to feel it. We have a little girl here in our hospital whose father and mother were both killed by exploding bombs while she was shot by a machine gun from an airplane. Several men and women are here who are badly mangled by bombs.

One of our teachers was returning to his home near Wusih by boat. An airplane came swooping over. He lay flat on the bottom of the boat. Three men sat up just over him. They were all mowed down by machine guns while our teacher narrowly escaped with his life. Mrs. ——, our Bible woman, was coming in from the country when a plane flew over and the machine-gun bullets hit all around her while she was kneeling in prayer. Still the Japanese say they do not attack noncombatants.

I now know what it means to be afraid for I am living in the midst of those who are frightened almost to death all the time. They do not know when bombs will be dropped from the cloudless sky upon them. If they escape the bombs, then they are likely to be hit with machine-gun bullets.

The other day a refugee train was on the track near Soochow. As the train was standing on the track at a station the planes flew over and dropped a number of bombs. None of them hit the train but as the people were fleeing helter-skelter from the train they were mowed down by machine guns.

Thus it goes and thus it goes. This is the reason so many people are afraid, especially while the planes are humming overhead.

Pullman Fare Boost Asked in Plea to I. C. C

Chicago, Nov. 26 (AP).—The Pullman Co. asked a 10 per cent increase in all Pullman fares in a petition filed today with the Interstate Commerce Commission.

A company statement said Pullman traffic volume showed a "declining trend of increase over the corresponding period in 1936" and that the increase "was necessary in view of the pronounced uptrend in the company's operating costs and taxes."

France's Turn

The Coming Talks At London.

WHEN LORD HALIFAX went to Germany some days ago to find out from Hitler whether and under what conditions Great Britain and the Third Reich could be drawn closer together in bonds of peace, all Europe cocked its ears. But it is safe to say that no outside nation was more intensely interested in the conversations at Berlin and Berchtesgaden than France.

Great Britain's relations with Germany have always been of interest and concern to France. But never has this been more true than now. For during the past 16 months France has revealed an almost pathologic dependence on Great Britain and French foreign policy has reflected in a remarkable degree the inhibitions, hesitations and uncertainties of British diplomacy. To many it has seemed as though France no longer had an independent policy of its own.

• • •

ACTUALLY this has never been entirely true. There were and are limits beyond which no French government would dare follow Great Britain. On the other hand, if France depended on Great Britain for support of its European position, Great Britain provided that support not out of any love for the French but out of a keen awareness of the value to her of the link to France.

But as Talleyrand said long ago: Every alliance consists of a horse and a rider. And in the Anglo-French alliance it has been Great Britain which has played the role of rider.

For that reason any deal made by the Chamberlain government with Hitler is certain to be of vital importance to France. For the effect of such a deal would be to place that nation on the horns of a possible dilemma. On the one hand, if the deal were regarded by the French as unsatisfactory France would have to pursue an independent course at a time when such a course is full of pitfalls. But on the other hand were France to follow Great Britain blindly into a deal with Germany, France might become more than ever the prisoner of Downing Street.

FORTUNATELY for France, Britain's eagerness to come to terms with Hitler is subject to certain important limitations, as the pessimistic British comment on the Halifax visit clearly reveals.

In the first place only a very small, though vociferous minority of the British people and their leaders, are prepared to surrender completely to German demands as the price for Anglo-German friendship and peace. And, secondly, the word moderation does not appear to exist in Hitler's vocabulary. He may be ready to postpone certain objectives stated in "Mein Kampf"; he shows no willingness to abandon them altogether.

Now it can be taken for granted that Great Britain is prepared to make some and, it may be considerable, concessions to the Third Reich. Not even the possibility of a redistribution of colonial territory can be ruled out although whenever that idea has been broached in England, there have been overwhelming objections to it even in quarters very friendly to Germany. But by and large Great Britain is not prepared to give the the Third Reich a completely free hand in Central Europe or elsewhere.

• • •

IN THIS particular British policy is more than a little inconsistent.

At no time has any British statesmen clearly indicated to Germany that Great Britain would oppose, by force if necessary, any upset of the status quo regarding Czechoslovakia, Austria, etc.

This circumstance has undoubtedly encouraged the Germans to expect a greater British tolerance of German aims in Central Europe than British statesmen are willing to grant. But, in the last analysis, the British or at least large sections of them, realize that Britain's larger interests are bound up with the maintenance of the status quo in Europe.

The proof that this is their real if unspoken view is seen in the brudging but nonetheless consistent support given France in its major diplomatic efforts in Europe.

Great Britain, for instance, has never criticized France for continuing the alliances with Poland, Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia. If not wholeheartedly in favor of the Franco-Soviet pact, British statesmen have withheld open criticism of it and, again and again, have sought to include Soviet Russia in a comprehensive agreement for the stabilization of peace in Europe.

• • •

THERE ARE elements in Great Britain which oppose such concessions to the French point of view. But these elements are by no means dominant either in the government or the nation. However, they have been strong enough to compel the government to make repeated attempts to come to terms with the Third Reich.

When Premier Chautemps and Foreign Minister Delbos of France arrive in London on Monday, they will have an opportunity to talk things over with Prime Minister Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary Eden, Lord Halifax and other British leaders.

Obviously the subject of greatest interest to them is what Halifax and Hitler talked about and whether the Berlin and Berchtesgaden conversations are to be continued.

France, too, would like to win over Germany to a program of peace and is prepared to make concessions for the achievement of that objective. But France even less than Great Britain is prepared to let Hitler have his way in Central and Eastern Europe.

Indeed, Halifax's revelations of what the Fuehrer told him may strengthen the determination of the French to keep their European alliances green at no matter what cost.

The English Language

By William Lyon Phelps

"You Don't Say."

All books dealing with the correct use of the English language are interesting to all intelligent users of it; I find myself that the subject is of enormous interest to vast numbers. And it should be. Every one should improve his speaking and writing.

Well, here is a little book called "You Don't Say!—A Guide to Pronunciation," written by Alfred H. Holt, and published in 1937 by Thomas Y. Crowell & Co., New York.

• • • •

I am sorry that he, like so many others, is yielding to the majority and allowing mere numbers instead of quality to determine the pronounciation of English words; because the majority of our American population prefer jazz to Beethoven, does it follow that jazz is really better music? Because the majority say NEVADDA, are we to spoil the music of that lovely name?

I do not agree with Mr. Holt that various admirable pronunciations are "doomed," nor do I agree with him in his joyful acquiescence in what he thinks is their fate. He says "Americans prefer" the sound of double oo for u after g; as in GUBERNATORIAL. That horrible, disgusting, mouth-filled word needed only the wrong pronunciation of that vowel to make it even worse.

Only the other day a radio speaker asked me how I pronounced CULINARY. I am glad that I agree with Mr. Holt on this, anyhow. His alphabetical list of words is what makes his book most valuable.

• • • •

At the same time appears a tiny book (Oxford University Press) called "AN A. B. C. OF ENGLISH USAGE" by H. A. Treble and G. H. Vallins, with a preface by Henry Seidel Canby, and on the title-page is printed "American Edition."

This is a valuable book of reference; and the words and phrases are arranged alphabetically. In this book the main emphasis is not on pronunciation, but on the meaning of words and their correct grammatical use.

Do you follow "none" with a singular or plural verb?

Tom McCarthy

Some Salesgirls Take Down Their Hair.

"SHE LOOKED like a flock of sheep grazing on a mountain side."

Well, sir, that turned me around. I have never seen a woman that looked like a flock of sheep grazing on a mountainside, so I was interested.

TOM McCARTHY.

"Young ladies," I said, because, beyond question, they were young ladies, "would you tell me more about a woman that looked like that?"

Well, it turned out that they were young ladies. They were willing to explain themselves, but they weren't willing to have their names in the paper. They were afraid they'd be fired!

"You see," said the blonde girl, "we're dress salesgirls, in the —— Department Store. We can talk out of school, but we can't identify ourselves . . . or the school."

After that, the blonde girl sort of took over the show.

"As a matter of fact," she said, "the lady that had the pastoral look was just a comic relief; you should hear about some of the other things."

But I wanted to get that matter of the sheep cleared up, so they told me all about it.

"We have a lot of funny customers," the blonde girl said, "but the flock of sheep was the funniest, when it came to looks. She must have weighed 250 pounds. But she insisted on buying a sheep-skin coat.

"If she'd let it go at that, we might not have noticed her. But, while she waited for us to bring out the coats which made her look twice her size, she sat down and smoked a big black cigar.

"Now, we get all kinds of customers," the blonde girl said, "but when they try to look like a flock of sheep, grazing on the slopes of Vesuvius, they look funny. This one was funny. We had to send out the oldest girl in the department to wait on her, for the simple reason that none of the rest of us could keep a straight face."

• • • •

"BUT," said the blonde girl, "the funny customers are the least of our worries. We have the 'types.'"

"The vicious types," the darker girl said, with emphasis.

I was sort of interested, so the girls told me some of the problems which beset the salesgirls in a Washington department store.

"Maybe you wouldn't call the customers 'problems,'" the blonde girl said, "but we call them that. We have to live with them, from 9 in the morning to 6 at night."

"We're not kicking," the darker girl said, "but we do resent some of the customers. We've got them labeled. We've got the 'Girlie' type.

"That kind of customer insists that everyone who waits on them should be called 'girlie.'"

"We get fed up with that," the blonde girl said.

"But one of the most regular shopping types is the matronly woman who always buys a dress which is too small, with the question, 'How much can it be let out at the seams?'"

• • • •

When the girls really got going on the types of shoppers which make life less livable for the salesgirls, they became scientifically analytical.

"Another pain-in-the-neck," said the blonde girl, "is the person who has no intention of purchasing. As long as they warn us that they're 'just looking,' they're all right. But some of them have us wait on them for two hours and then run along without buying anything, when they feel they've done their bit."

"It's a funny thing," the blonde girl said, "when you consider the answers the people of that type give you, as they drift through a department store.

"We ask them if we can help them out. Nine times out of ten, they don't tell us they're just looking. They usually have their own name for it, and, in their embarrassment, they sometimes blurt it out.

"'I'm just 'cruising' or just 'glancing' or even just 'grazing,' they'll tell us,'' the blonde girl said.

• • • •

AMONG THE RULES which department store salesgirls should abide by was revealed the old one which held that the customer is always right.

"No matter what they call Schiaparelli, you pronounce it the same way," they told me.

The meanest customers, in their opinions, were the ones that came in just before closing time, mussing up their well-ordered piles of goods. The best customers are actresses from the legitimate stage, who, besides showing a willingness to spend, were also appreciative of efforts.

Husbands who accompanied their wives made the whole thing easier. They usually clinched the bargain, and you could be sure the goods wouldn't be returned. Men bought for keeps.

U.A.W.A. Strikers Seek C. I. O. Aid as Ford Walkout Fails

St. Louis, Nov. 26 (AP).—Leaders of the United Automobile Workers of America, stirred by their second failure to halt operations of the Ford Motor Co.'s St. Louis assembly plant, rallied C. I. O. forces tonight in support of the union's strike.

Delmond Garst, U. A. W. A. regional director, emerging from a conference with his strategy board and representatives of other C. I. O. unions in the city, declared the strike would be carried on and won, "if it takes six months." He was secretive, however, regarding future plans.

Earlier, at a union "pep meeting," he shouted, "we're going to turn loose one of these days. We're going to go the limit in this strike. It makes no difference how far we have to go."

Pittman Bemoans Trading Day 'Off;' Garner Gets Two

By the Associated Press.

Vice President Garner and Senator Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, who often fills in for Garner in the presiding officer's chair of the Senate, have a "working agreement," they disclosed yesterday.

"You'll have to be here Monday," Pittman told the Vice President. "I want to go duck hunting."

"All right, I'll trade you," replied the Vice President. "You take Monday off and I'll go Wednesday and Thursday."

"That's always the kind of trade you get out of that fellow," moaned Pittman, after the Vice President hurried away. "He gets two days for one."

Streamline Urged For Cotton Bales

By the Associated Press.

Representative Hampton P. Fulmer, of Orangeburg, S. C., yesterday proposed that the "ragged, unsightly and disgraceful-looking" American cotton bale be streamlined and modernized.

He drafted a bill which he said he hoped would encourage the use of bagging made from cotton instead of jute made from material imported from India. It would authorize the Agriculture Secretary to purchase cotton bagging for sale to farmers on a competitive basis.

The bagging could be purchased until 100,000 bales of cotton had been removed from the market.

McGrady Elected Director for RCA

New York, Nov. 26 (AP).—The election of Edward F. McGrady, former Assistant Secretary of Labor, as a director of the RCA Manufacturing Co. was announced today by David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America.

McGrady, who gained prominence as a Government "trouble shooter" in labor disputes, resigned from his Federal post last September to become director of labor relations for RCA.

Within a month he negotiated a contract with the United Electrical and Radio Workers of America, a C. I. O. affiliate, covering 10,000 employes.

Young Love Is Given Innings At the Capitol

'Second Honeymoon' Stars Power-Young Combine Romantically.

"SECOND HONEYMOON." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Philip Wylie, adapted to the screen by Kathryn Scola and Darrell Ware, co-starring Loretta Young and Tyrone Power, with Stuart Erwin, Claire Trevor, Marjorie Weaver, Lyle Talbot, J. Edward Bromberg, Paul Hurst, Jayne Regan, Kai K. Dunson and Mary Treen. Directed by Walter Lang. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

This freshest version of the adult kindergarten comedy now high in Hollywood favor, runs true to form. Its protagonists are millionaire-ish young people who bounce about the country in privately chartered planes.

They divorce, marry and bruise easily and are all too whimsical and mad for words. They are a bunch of sophisticated simpletons, if you ask us. But, as such, they lend themselves admirably to the comedy form of grown folks acting like children which is the current celluloid mode.

The romantic combination of Tyrone Power and Loretta Young, so well established in popular favor, should make "Second Honeymoon" a box-office boon. For Miss Young it is a charming and appropriate vehicle. It suits her style of good looks and her flair for wearing expensive-looking clothes. It gives her a chance to be sugary, pettish and downright bad-tempered.

But Tyrone Power deserves better dramatic fare than saccharin tablets. Not that he doesn't do a fine chore in his role and enrich it with many lightly subtle touches. But a stronger part would better befit his talents.

Spicy Comedy.

Those who like their comedy a bit highly seasoned will appreciate the tang of several situations in the picture. Thus the show opens with an affectionate Young-Power kiss, although Miss Young is another man's wife. The final fade-out shows Loretta and Tyrone capering off on a Havana honeymoon, although her divorce is yet unconsummated. The Hays office has smoothed over the first situation with the thought that Tyrone is, after all, a first husband, and the second with his statement that he will be bridegroom No. 3 as well as No. 1 in Loretta's life.

Marjorie Weaver is the particular gift to pictures in "Second Honeymoon." This quite dewy little newcomer lends particular luster to the role of a "child of nature," whom Tyrone picks up on a street corner and brings to one of Loretta's swanky dinner parties.

Stuart Erwin's honest Irish mug is somewhat non-apropos in the role of Tyrone's valet, although his acting is flawless. Lyle Talbot makes a standout of his thankless role of Husband No. 2, a stodgy guy whom Loretta has lassoed on her rebound from her first marriage. Claire Trevor and J. Edward Bromberg prove smoothly amusing as the best friends who cheer on Loretta's matrimonial didoes.

Apollon Occupies Stage.

Dave Apollon's "Varieties of 1938" is a big and colorful show, enriched with a variety of performers who do not all, somehow, bear the trademark of the wily Apollon picking.

Hit of the group is Cass Daley, a lanky and diverting brunette, with something of the technique of Martha Raye. Nobody's good little girl, Cass still had her way with the audience which calloused their palms gladly in her honor.

Bob Ripa, truly a genuine in the art of juggling and a handsome blond Dane in the bargain, was another favorite. Smartly novel and with overtones of humor was the turn of Max and his gang of little dogs who seemed to enjoy their work. The Five Hollywood Co-Eds sing and turn handsprings. Annavann and her Gladiators do a conventional adagio.

The unique Dave Apollon himself seemed not quite as overflowing with spirits as usual. Perhaps he needs some new wisecracks. Or perhaps those Hollywood shorts he has been doing have got him down.

Trans-Lux

After all, this Trans-Lux Theater is a newsreel theater—and how, this week!

Football, football, and more football, tops the news. We are telling, you this football coverage this week is unique. For example, Maryland vs. Georgetown, Notre Dame vs. Northwestern and Harvard vs. Yale, all mighty fine photography and thrilling shots. And speaking of football, get the new six team play. No, we won't say any more, except that when the New York Giants and the Green Bay Packers get together they end in a fist fight.

The remainder of the news gives you shots of President Cardenas inspecting the village of Spanish war orphans located in Mexico. Peiping, now under Japanese rule, is vividly portrayed. Also in the news we see, in addition to many other subjects, the steamship Normandie getting the blue ribbon for speed; Le Bourget, the last word in modern airports, and, believe it or not, the Indians, not selling or giving, but receiving blankets from Uncle Sam.

Lowell Thomas takes you places uunder the title of "Going Places." It is a travel picture describing the beauty of the island, Pitcairn, where live the survivors of the mutiny of the Bounty.

The musical short, "Pacific Paradise," features old Cliff (Ukelele Ike) Edwards and an honest to goodness royal Hawaiian orchestra. Another interesting short subject is the "Popular Science" feature, showing in detail the delicate operations necessary to remove foreign objects from the bodies of humans.

There are some grand shots of the dinner turnout for Walter Johnson, and in addition to many other delightful features the show is complete with "I Wanna Be a Sailor," a Merrie Melody cartoon in color.

Ribbons.

Lupe Velez, vivacious Mexican actress currently appearing with Wheeler and Woolsey in "High Flyers," worked as a shop girl in Mexico City's largest department store before going on the stage.

Grounds.

The secrets of the coffee business are revealed in "She's Got Everything," new romantic comedy which stars Ann Sothern and Gene Raymond. Raymond, a coffee tycoon, provides refuge for Miss Sothern, an impoverished heiress fleeing from a mob of hungry creditors.

Miss Moore Mixes Opera and Pop Tunes In a Romantic Comedy on Earle Screen

Star Is Lustily Supported by Celebrated Cast in 'I'll Take Romance.'

"I'LL TAKE ROMANCE." Columbia Pictures filmization of an original story by Stephen Morehouse Avery, adapted to the screen by George Oppenheimer and Jane Murfin, starring Grace Moore, with Melvyn Douglas, Stuart Erwin, Helen Westley, Margaret Hamilton, Frank Forest, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Franklin Pangborn, Richard Carle, Walter Kingsford and Esther Muir. Directed by Edward H. Griffith. Reviewed Friday afternoon at the Earle Theater.

In this latest Columbia medium for the display of Grace Moore's gorgeous soprano voice, the operatic arias which are introduced with more or less logic quite overpower a frivolously comic story that is less substantial than its musical investiture and the vocal eminence of its star deserve.

BELL.

Since Miss Moore is cast as a diva of grand opera, seeking to evade a contract to sing in Buenos Aires in order to accept a more lucrative one to appear in Paris, the operatic excerpts are interjected into the action without a complete rupture of the spirit of the piece, but it still remains true that between the vocal interludes, Miss Moore is distinctly a musical comedy actress engaged in fluffy romanticisms and tenuous comedy that seem just a trifle incongruous.

The plot hinges upon the infatuation that springs up between the singer and the handsome young emissary from the Argentine, who journeys to New York to enforce the terms of the agreement by which Elsa Terry has pledged herself to sing a season in the "Paris of South America." At first he cannot even obtain an audience with the object of his quest, she having been apprised of his sinister designs and the consequences of his success that will befall her bank account. Finally, by a farcical ruse, Jim Guthrie, masquerading as a Parisian music critic, meets the diva and then the flippant fun starts.

The Old "Snatch" Racket.

As a last resort he plots a kidnaping whereby Elsa is to be taken aboard the steamship Orinoco, bound for South America, instead of her intended ship for France. The trick succeeds, with the singer's surreptitious co-operation, until she is told that Jim is only after the money she will make for him and is professing a completely counterfeit grand passion for her charming self. In Buenos Aires, she turns the tables and does a little first rate kidnaping on her own account.

Many contributory figures are involved in this game of battledore and shuttlecock—Jim's confederate, Pancho Brownelles, whose real name, of course, is Pete Brown; Elsa's crochety aunt, a former star of opera now beaten into obscurity by the years, except in the capacity of Elsa's manager; Margot, the maid, and auntie's browbeaten husband. These amusingly inconsequential roles are played with comic skill by Stuart Erwin, who introduces "She'll Be Comin' Round the Mountain," in swing time, to high musical circles; Helen Westley, as the aunt; Margaret Hamilton, a distinctly acidulous and sharp-tongued maid, and Richard Carle, in the avuncular role that is less funny than he is capable of being.

Miss Moore portrays the stellar character in gay doings that occasionally lag a bit under their intended briskness with an evident nostalgic recollection of the days when she was in musical comedy and revue, long antedating her triumphs in opera. She sings the theme song, "I'll Take Romance," and the lusty "Comin' Round the Mountain" with almost the enthusiasm with which she renders the gavotte from "Manon," the drinking song from "La Traviata," the finale of the third act of "Martha" and the duet with Pinkerton from Puccini's "Madame Butterfly," in which the tenor role is sung by Frank Forest.

Douglas Also Warbles.

Melvyn Douglas — probably coached by his wife, Helen Gahagan, who also has sung in opera—bursts into song on occasion, when not cooking up comic didoes with which to discomfit Miss Moore. Mr. Douglas still is not so facile a comedian as Stuart Erwin, who twangs a mean guitar in the "Mountain" number, but he is only infrequently stodgy. Helen Westley is splendidly cast as the aunt who can be melted only by flattery and the memory of her own romantic youth.

The supporting players are fully up to the slim tasks that are imposed upon them, notably Ferdinand Gottschalk, as the real Paris correspondent, and Franklin Pangborn in a telephone "bit."

The stage acts introduced at the Earle this week by Audrey Sieber, the fashion-plate mistress of ceremonies, are familar to Washington audiences. The three husky young women and their three agile brothers (presumably), known as the Honey family, open the bill with their furious feat of tumbling and gymnasticism and are followed by George Kirby and Helen Duvall in a round of badinage, dancing and a dash of Grade A barytoning by Mr. Kirby. Stan Kavanagh, best of the current jugglers and late of the "Follies," comes next with his bouncing tennis balls and Indian clubs, tossed around in broken rhythm.

The week's headliners are Gomez and Winona, assisted by Don Costello, in a group of their graceful dances and Mr. Costello's intricate tapping.

The customary short screen features supplement a bill that was cordially received by yesterday afternoon's first audience.

Horton's Belfry.

Edward Everett Horton, who plays the comedy lead in the Ernst Lubitsch production, "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," is building a belfry on the roof of the barn at his country place near Encino. It is to house an antique school bell which his brother purchased as a gift for him in a Michigan antique shope last summer.

Plays Comedy Role in Filmusical

One of the drollest of the cinema's funny men, Stuart Erwin, whose likeness appears above, is cast in an amusing part in "I'll Take Romance," now on the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. The romantic leads are acted and sung by Grace Moore, operatic soprano, and Melvyn Douglas.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 26.—Idol Chatter: If someone filmed the off-screen gags of Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray, the net result would be a five-bell comedy. William Powell is the only male in town who can look dignified while powdering his face. Height of something or other: Movie stars who drive down Hollywood boulevard in magenta-colored sportsters—and then complain about the public's curiosity. Claudette Colbert's humor usually has a sarcastic note. If Louise Hovick clicks, she will be one of the screen's biggest stars—five feet eight inches tall and 126 pounds in weight.

• • • •

Louise Rainer acts with her eyes, ZaSu Pitts with her hands, Garbo with her voice—and then there is Mae West. Getting personal: If I were Louis B. Mayer, I would buy my new import, Ilona Massey, a tennis racket . . . or a rowing machine . . . or some such. For a man who beefs about the attentions of women, Nelson Eddy acts very strangely when introduced to an attractive girl. Come to think of it, there has never been a star named Diane.

• • • •

Amazing how many screen stars have myopia. Best off-screen comedy of the week: Katharine Hepburn's imitation of an imitator imitating Katharine Hepburn. Some stars are really temperamental; the majority just have bad tempers and the poor taste to display them. Tom Ricketts, Hollywood's oldest actor, is a great Eddie Cantor fan "because Eddie's jokes bring back the dear dead days of yore." Hollywood incongruities: Robert Montgomery, with a million or so "on ice," denouncing the capitalistic system.

Back in Toledo, Ohio, a baby girl named Phyllis Welch was born on Hollywood avenue. A few days later another baby girl was born in the house next door. Her name was Pauline Swank. They grew up together and were inseparable pals. When she was 20 Phyllis visited family friends in New York, landed a job on the stage, and remained there. Pauline, her name changed to Craig, came to Hollywood, worked as an extra and eventually won an MGM contract. The two girls corresponded for a time and then lost track of one another for seven years. But, the other day, Pauline, playing an important role in a current picture, went into the projection room to see the "rushes." She arrived early—in time to watch the first screen test of a newly signed player. You guessed it—it was a test of Phyllis Welch. The two kids who were pals on Hollywood avenue are again inseparables on Hollywood boulevard.

Use that ancient expression, "taken to the cleaners" in front of Randolph Scott and he immediately button-holes you to tell this story. Seems he bundled up several suits and sent them to a tailor shop that he had never before patronized. Opening it, he found a check, bearing his signature, and a terse note which informed him that the tailor had discovered it in the pocket of one of the coats—signed, but not filled in. "I have taken the liberty of writing in the payee and the amount," the tailor said. Randy examined the check again. It read: "Pay to the order of U. R. Careless, $1,000."

Wild excitement in a little Hollywood Boulevard cafe this morning. Olga Celeste, the famous "cat woman" of Hollywood, was taking her pet leopard, Nissa, to the RKO Studio for added scenes in Katharine Hepburn's new picture. Being early for the call, she stopped for breakfast in the cafe and took Nissa, on her leash, in with her. As she walked in a woman lost her head and screamed. Nissa pulled against the leash and the strap broke. And in less than it takes to tell about it, everyone in that cafe was sprinting for the door. Olga eventually found Nissa, scared stiff, parked under one of the cafe tables. A great town, Hollywood.

Production to Start Soon on Many Pictures

Seven pictures for production in the immediate future at Universal Studios were announced last week by Charles R. Rogers, executive vice president in charge of production.

First to go before the cameras is "More Than Love," a crime story which is not a mystery but which has a very unusual plot. It started last week with Ted Sloman, director, and Edmund Grainger, producer. The leads will be played by Fay Wray and Kent Taylor while Larry Blake and Nan Grey will be in the top supporting roles.

This week will see the start of three pictures. Foremost among them is Deanna Durbin's new starring vehicle, "Mad About Music." It will be directed by Norman Taurog, who recently completed the direction of "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," and produced by Joe Pasternak. A supporting cast of outstanding names now is being assembled for this important production.

Starting during the same week will be the third of the Bob Baker Western series produced by Trem Carr, and the second of the Crime Club series. Baker's next vehicle probably will be "Border Wolves" with Joseph H. Lewis directing. The next Crime Club picture will be either "The Black Doll" or "The Lady in the Morgue." The latter is another of the Jonathan Latimer Detective Crime stories. Otis Garrett, formerly a film editor, will be given his first opportunity as a director.

Two pictures—"Flash Gordon's Trip to Mars" and "Mountains Are My Kingdom"—will also go into production during the week of November 15. Larry (Buster) Crabbe has been borrowed from Paramount to play the title role in the Flash Gordon picture, which is to be a 15-chapter serial based on the well-known cartoon strip. Jean Rogers, Universal contract player, has been cast as the feminine lead—the part of Dale. Those two young players played the leads in the first Flash Gordon serial, which was made some two years ago and which was such a success it played in first-run houses throughout the country. A new chapter picture will be directed by Ford Beebe and produced by Barney Sarecky.

"Mountains Are My Kingdom" will have Noah Beery, jr., in the lead role. It will be directed by Wyndham Gittens and produced by Henry Macrae.

"A Welcome Imposter," based on Channing Pollock's novel, "Synthetic Gentleman," has been set for the week of November 22, with Arthur Lubin directing and Trem Carr producing.

"The Rage of Paris," a starring vehicle for Danielle Darrieux—recently arrived French star—has been scheduled for December. This is to be one of the most important productions on the studio's current program. It will be directed by Henry Koster, famed director of "Three Smart Girls" and "One Hundren Men and a Girl."

In addition to those productions, for which definite dates have been set, Rogers said that several others would start between now and the first of the year. These include "The Winners' Circle," "The Eye of the Needle," "The Nurse From Brooklyn" and "The Crime of Dr. Hallett."

Simone in Radio Song Debut Soon

To convince skeptics that it really is her voice that movie fans will hear in "Love and Kisses," Simone Simon plans to sing over the radio shortly after she finishes the picture.

Possessing a coloratura soprano voice that music critics on the Twentieth Century-Fox lot believe is the outstanding voice discovery of the year in films, Miss Simon sings the "Bell Song" from the opera, "Lakme," and two popular ballads which Mack Gordon and Harry Revel composed.

Canine Player Bites a Piece Out of Bankroll

One Doggy Scene in Film Costs M-G-M a Huge Sum to Make.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Nov. 26.—M.-G.-M. will be figuring far into the night, trying to discover how many thousands of dollars it cost today to make a 15-second scene in which a dog woke up from a snooze on the floor, stretched, heard an intruder outside, and barked three times.

The dog's name was Luke, and he was smart as a Missouri hound, but it took the combined efforts of Director Clarence Brown, all his assistants, Luke's trainer and half a dozen actors, a pound of meat and most of the day to turn the trick.

When it was finished, Luke wagged his tail wearily and went to sleep without the help of anybody.

The picture is entitled "Benefits Forgot," in which Walter Huston is a circuit-riding preacher in Ohio in 1850. The scene shows an old log house (the logs are old telephone poles, chinked with real mud), in which one of Parson Huston's parishioners, white-haired Leona Roberts, lives.

She plays the part of an old crone, sitting before the fire, smoking her pipe, with Luke on the floor beside her. The fire consists of blue-blazing "photoflame," a cottony substance which burns with the odor of gunpowder. Ordinary flame won't do in a movie fireplace because it's reddish and yellowish and hence films black.

Miss Roberts' pipe is a real corncob, but it doesn't contain smoking tobacco. It's loaded with a crumpled cigarette, so she won't get sick.

Lampblacked Luke.

Luke is a mighty dirty-looking hound, made that way with lampblack carefully smeared onto his red and white coat. His trainer, Rennie Renfrew, does the dirty work, getting his hands far blacker than he does Luke, who wags his tail all through the process.

When Luke's appearance is bad enough to suit everybody, Renfrew places him on the floor at Miss Robert's feet. Luke's tail thumps the boards. Renfrew pleads with him to stop, to act sleepy. Luke shuts his eyes, but somehow he can't keep his tail quiet.

Renfrew talks to him and gives him a piece of meat and Luke eventually catches on. He keeps his tail still.

Luke is supposed to stay on the floor until he hears a noise outside the door. Then he is to jump up, go toward the door, stop three paces in front of it, and bark. He can't go any closer, else he'll get outside the camera's range. This is getting a little complicated, even for a hound as intelligent as Luke. It's particularly hard for him to understand, because Renfrew must stay out of sight of the camera.

Meat Is Not Meet.

He gets on the other side of the door and shoves a piece of meat through a chink in it. Luke bounds for the meat. That's no go. Luke can't eat until he's barked and he can't bark until he stops three feet from the door.

Renfrew explains it all to him carefully. Luke listens and then they rehearse. Luke makes a lot of mistakes, but after each try Renfrew pats him on the head, tells him he's doing fine, and gives him another chunk of meat. As the hours go by, with their attendant charges being added up by the bookkeeping department, Luke gets the whole routine down pat, and does it perfectly. All hands congratulate him and he goes to sleep, even ignoring the extra piece of beef that Renfrew offers him as a final reward.

"Training dogs for the movies is like no animal-training anywhere else," Renfrew says. "We never hit a dog, never beat him, never even speak sharply to him. If we were to do so, our pup would put his tail between his legs and feel insulted for at least a day. We couldn't use him in the pictures at all."

Horse Too Speedy, Gable Takes Spill

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Nov. 26.

CONFLICT: Next week is the date scheduled for the trial of Robert Irwin, the sculptor who confessed to the Easter Sunday Gedeon murders. District Attorney Dodge had announced that he himself will try the case—but that was before the election . . . Dodge won't try the Irwin case. He will postpone it until after January 1, when Thomas E. Dewey replaces him as Manhattan's chief prosecutor. Thus will begin Mr. Dewey's legal headaches, for New York's racket buster will be opposed by America's best criminal lawyer, Samuel S. Leibowitz.

ROMANCE: Ben Yost, who, with his Varsity Eight, has appeared in a number of Broadway musicals, was married last week-end to Mary Rowland, one of the beautiful young ladies of the Paradise chorusline. Miss Rowland, daughter of wealthy Indianapolis parents, wasn't quite sure how her family would react to this marriage; In fact, they already had entered objection . . . And so before taking any steps Mr. Yost and his fiancee wired the Rowlands: "Ben and I just eloped. We were married this afternoon" . . . Two hours later came the replying wire: "Congratulations, best wishes and our blessings." So Ben and Mary then rushed out—and were married.

• • • •

SUCCESS: Broderick Crawford, son of Helen Broderick, opened in Sam Harris' new hit, "Of Mice and Men." . . . Crawford told Wallace Ford that he'd like to have the No. 2 dressing room upstairs and was assigned that room. "But why do you want that upstairs room?" Wallace asked . . . "You, see," Crawford explained, "it was my mother's—in 'As Thousands Cheer.'"

• • • •

WASTE: Last week United Artists hired a truck, bearing a sign: "What Do You Bankers Know About Hollywood?—See 'Stand-In' and Find Out." The truck was hired for Wednesday and Thursday, to tour the Wall Street sector, because the picture concerns a banker who visits Hollywood to cure its flagrant waste . . . On Friday, after his employment was over, the truck owner volunteered to work an extra day without pay. And on that Friday his uninsured truck caught fire and was destroyed.

LAMENT: Tallulah Bankhead, who just closed in "Antony and Cleopatra," discussed the drama reviews of that show. "So the critics said I was no Cleopatra?" she commented. "Well, the critics aren't Antonies—though they ARE Caesar."

• • • •

WEALTH: The newspapers recently frontpaged the report that the New York Discovery Theater's production of "The Dynasty," a play about the Rockefellers, was refused presentation at the Lenox Little Theater. The producers alleged that a Rockefeller representative had interceded with the theater management to force the cancellation. This, however, doesn't end the episode . . . Yesterday arrangements were made for the show's presentation at another theater. And yesterday the producers retained an attorney to nick the Rockefellers for some of their wealth, for damages resulting from the cancellation.

LAUGHTER: Pandro Berman, the R.-K.-O. producer, visited backstage at "Having Wonderful Time," the play he's producing for the screen. Berman told Solen Burry, of the cast, that he didn't think that many members of the cast were funny enough for the screen . . . "Listen, Mr. Berman," Burry countered, "this afternoon I went to Forty-second street and saw two of your movies for 15 cents, and nobody laughed. Here, for $3.30—they scream!"

PURSUIT: Last August a hitchhiker arrived at Moss Hart's farm in Pennsylvania, said his name was Horne and that he had hiked from Texas with a copy of a play he wrote. "I'm not interested in any plays now," Hart told him. "See me in November." . . . Last week the same man arrived. "You know, I've just been to Boston," Hart stated . . . "I know that," Horne replied. "I hitchhiked there but missed you, so I came here." . . . "Why do you do this?" Hart returned. "Frankly, the only thing I can do is just read it." . . . "That," Horne answered, "is all I want."

The Lesson-Sermon also inculdes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Christian Science goes to the bottom of mental action, and reveals the theodicy which indicates the rightness of all divine action, as the emanation of divine Mind, and the consequent wrongness of the opposite so-called action—evil, occultism, necromancy, mesmerism, animal magnetism, hypnotism."

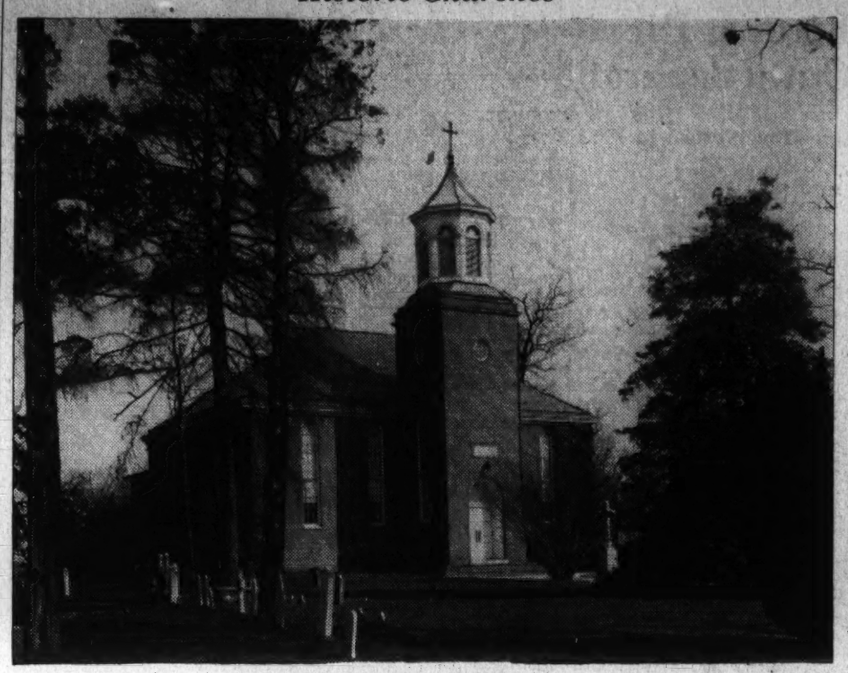
Historic Churches



ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

St. Paul's, Founded in 1712, Is Oldest Church in Capital

Original Structure Withstood Ravages of Time Until Fire in 1921; New Building Stands on Original 'Glebe' of 100 Acres.

Founded in 1712, St. Paul's Church in Rock Creek Parish is proud of the distinction of being Washington's oldest church. The first Episcopal service in the District of Columbia was held that year by the Rev. John Fraiser, who became the rector of the new parish.

Seven years after the organization of the parish, Col. John Bradford gave 100 acres of land as a "glebe" for a church and 1,000 pounds of tobacco to pay for the building. The walls of this original structure withstood the stress of the Revolution, the Civil War and many alterations but finally were destroyed by fire in 1921. The simple colonial building in which the congregation now meets stands on the original glebe.

A distinctive feature of the lovely churchyard is a huge Glebe Oak, which marks the site of the old building. Hanging in the oak is a church bell, salvaged, tradition says, from a locomotive which ran off the old Long Bridge across the Potomac during the Civil War.

During the colonial period St. Paul's operated its own tobacco warehouse in Georgetown. Parish records show that income from this source amounted to 363 pounds, 3 shillings, 4 pence in 1767.

A portion of Rock Creek glebe has been used as a burial ground since 1719. Of all the notables buried in Rock Creek Cemetery, none has a more striking memorial than that of Mrs. Henry Adams. The shrouded figure which marks her grave was referred to as "The Mystery of the Hereafter" by its sculptor, Augustus Saint-Gaudens, but it is more generally known as "Grief," the name suggested by Mark Twain.

St. Paul's has had 18 rectors in its 225 years of existence. The present rector is the Rev. Franklin Johns Bohanan, D. D.

New York Pastor Will Preach Advent Sermon at D. C. Church

REV. SAMUEL SHOEMAKER.

The Rev. Samuel Moor Shoemaker, rector of Calvary Church, New York City, will deliver the sermon on Advent Sunday, tomorrow, at the morning prayer service at 11 a. m. in Washington Cathedral. His subject will be "The Church Has the Answer."

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., LL. D., bishop of Washington, will deliver the sermon at the people's evensong service at 4 o'clock. Music for both services will be furnished by the Cathedral choir of men and boys, under Robert Barrow.

Coming from the New York parish which sent Henry Yates Satterlee to Mount Saint Alban as the first bishop of Washington more than 30 years ago, the Rev. Mr. Shoemaker is a native of Baltimore. After attending St. George's School in Newport, he was graduated from Princeton University in 1919. His ordination as deacon and priest in the Episcopal Church followed special studies at the General Theological Seminary and Union Theological Seminary in New York City.

He and Mrs. Shoemaker, who will be the guests of the Bishop and Mrs. Freeman over the week-end, have taken part in what they term "spiritual revolution" in Norway, Denmark, Switzerland and England during the last five years. It will be Mr. Shoemaker's first appearance in the pulpit of Washington Cathedral, he having preached in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York City a few weeks ago upon invitation from the Right Rev. William L. Manning, D. D., LL. D., bishop of New York.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

'Why Is It?' Asks Career Woman Who Is Habitually Either in Love With or Loved By, Bosses.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am not a young girl. I am old enough to have acquired some sense—even though I haven't. I have a very good job, splendid salary, opportunities for advancement, varied and stimulating contacts, exceedingly interesting work. But here is the trouble—I am in love with my boss and he is in love with me. An old story to you, and to me, too. And therein lies the tale.

* * * *

Ever since I have been working this thing has been happening. I was interested in a phrase, "chemical attraction," used in one of your articles a few days ago. That is exactly what it is, in my case. I have had about seven different bosses during my working life and eventually in each case the same thing happened. In those case where I was not "chemically" attracted I had no difficulty in handling the situation, drew a strict line between business and social life, and made them like it.

* * * *

However, when the "chemical attraction" reaches me I don't know just what to do. The first time, I had no necessity to make a decision. The man was killed, very tragically. The next time (and it worried me considerably that there could be a next time) I had to make up my mind what to do. I took quite a long leave, a good bit of money and went on an extended trip; had a grand time, met lots of men (as I had intended), regained my equilibrium and came back thinking everything would be all right. However, I found everything just exactly as it was before. So, with my employer's full knowledge of why I was doing it, I got another job at the first opportunity. Today, this man is my best and truest friend. We have managed to live down the attraction but it took time and separation.

* * * *

Now, after four years, the same thing has happened again. I am discouraged. I have worked hard. I like my job. I have to work in order to live and I feel that I have truly been doing my part to avoid a recurrence of any such situation. But here it is. I feel it is almost more than I am called upon to do to look for another job. And even if I succeeded in locating something else, what assurance do I have the same thing would not happen again? I have tried, unsuccessfully, to avoid these situations.

* * *

This man's wife leaves him often and for long periods but I am sure she is very fond of him. Though they have no children, I am old-fashioned enough to believe a wife has certain inviolable rights. But he is lonesome and turns to me for companionship, which I long above everything to give him. I feel that I must be at fault to some extent but I have thought things over and cannot find out where. I do feel, however, that this has not adversely affected the work of either of us. In fact, when I am on duty he does more and better work than otherwise. I see that he does. What do you think my duty is in this matter? And also, when and if I succeed in extricating myself from this trying situation, how can I avoid another one? Sincerely yours,

PUZZLED.

Self-Understanding Needed.

DEAR PUZZLED: It is my opinion that you are primarily responsible for these "chemical attractions" which eventually blossom between your respective employers and yourself. Your whole personality drive is compressed into too narrow a field. You are the sort of woman who "marries" her job, so to speak, and subconsciously expects it to serve her needs in the fields of work, love and play. You bring your biological and social drive into the office with you, instead of the professional drive alone, which is all that is needed there and all, indeed, that properly belongs. There is, no doubt, a powerful, intangible overtone to your actions and reactions which proclaims lack of and yearning for reciprocal love; and suggests, as well, that you have rich potentialities to bring to such a relationship. Whether you have or not remains to be proven. So far, according to your story, you have managed to side-step a showdown. This implies to me that other factors than considerations of honor and promptings of conscience have held you back.

* * * *

The striking similarity of these abortive relationships constitutes pretty strong circumstantial evidence that you are essentially afraid of and subconsciously averse to a normal love relationship. Psychoanalysts and psychiatrist tell us that one who consistently falls in love with (or, rather, fancies himself in love with) and indirectly invites the love of persons of the opposite sex whom he canot have—with whom marriage is impossible because of conventional deterrents—is a person who is running away from love, with its demand for self surrender; and from marriage, with its burden of social responsibility and need of emotional maturity.

* * *

Such a person, of course, automatically deludes himself into believing he is doing just the opposite. He doesn't realize, often cannot be induced to face the fact, that it is himself and not blind or implacable Fate which creates these emotional impasses. He is covering up (not very successfully) at great personal cost, the existence in himself of remediable fears, inhibitions and immature levels of emotional development all of which have to do with the sexual and psychic sides of his personality. The reason he finds himself in head-on collision with new situations that are identical to those he ran away from is because he cannot outrun himself. He continues to externalize his inner conflict.

* * * *

The cure, of course, is self understanding, intelligent self development and wholesome self expression. In your case, it means recognizing the need of and deliberately creating opportunities for social and emotional release which have nothing whatever to do with your work or your boss. It means, bluntly, getting married and establishing an emotional and social anchorage, a preponderant focus of interest, outside of and away from the office. Try it. You'll find, I'll wager, that your office relationships thereafter will be completely and serenely impersonal. M. H.

New Veils Reach Waistline

Christmas Candy Recipes Featured In Post's Contest

The candy season is here. In downtown apartments and in suburban and country homes, the aroma of homemade candy soon will penetrate the air. These sweetmeats are dear to the heart of both young and old, and almost everyone has a food fudge recipe.

Recipes for these Christmas candies should be passed along. The Post this week sponsors a contest for this purpose. Five cash prizes are offered. The first is $3, the second $2, and there are three $1 prizes.

Perhaps you have a way to keep fudge from turning to sugar and of retaining a creamy texture. Or a secret for making penuche or divinity. Perhaps it is a Christmas candy that you have used successfully for gift packages. If your recipe is new and delicious, then enter it in the contest. It may bring you a cash award.

To qualify in the contest, write out your recipe clearly, giving complete directions for preparation. Mail to Jean Green, Post food editor, before December 4.

Interesting Ways of Using Nuts Are Shown in Recipe Contest

Serve as Stuffing for Baked Peppers in Prize-Winning Dish; Also Are Ingredients of Bread Puddings and Cakes.

By Jean Green.

NUTS provided the base for many unusual dishes in the last favorite recipe contest. The tendency seems to be to recognize them as a nutritious part of the diet and to include them in planning meat substitutes. The first prize winner, sent in by Mrs. George Canalle, New Market, Va., is for stuffed peppers. Soft bread crumbs are mixed with chopped walnut kernels. Green peppers stuffed with this filling are baked tender in a tomato sauce.

Baked Stuffed Peppers.

6 green peppers
2 cups of soft bread crumbs
1½ cups chopped walnut kernels
2 teaspoons of salt
1½ cups of chopped cooked meat
3 tablespoons of melted fat
1½ cups of tomato sauce
½ cup of cold water

Wash peppers and remove stems and seeds. Cook in boiling water for 10 minutes. Drain and rinse in cold water. Mix the crumbs with the walnuts, salt, meat, melted butter, ½ cup of tomato sauce and the cold water. Fill the peppers with this mixture and stand in a buttered baking dish. Pour the remaining cup of tomato sauce around them and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 30 minutes. Baste with tomato sauce during baking.

Nut and Orange Bread.

Cook the peeling of four oranges in 1 cup of cold water and 1 teaspoon of soda for 5 minutes. Cool. Make a sirup of ½ cup of cold water, ¾ cup of sugar. Put orange peel, cut in small pieces, in sirup and cook for 3 minutes. Cool.

3½ cups of flour, not measured before sifting
½ cup of sugar
3¾ teaspoons of baking powder
½ teaspoon of salt
2 eggs
¾ cup of sweet milk
2 teaspoons of butter
1 cup of pecans

Mix in order given. Add orange and sriup last. Half fill pound baking powder cans and bake for 45 minutes in a medium oven. Reduce the heat during the last ten minutes and remove cover. May also be baked in bread pans as a loaf.

Luscious Christmas Cookies.

1 pound of black walnuts
1 pound of brown sugar
4 eggs
½ teaspoon of baking powder
½ teaspoon of salt
6 tablespoons of flour

Beat the eggs light. Add the brown sugar, flour containing salt and baking powder. Lastly, add nuts in good-sized pieces. Drop on a well-greased baking sheet and cook in oven (350 degrees) for 15 or 20 minutes.

Mrs. Davey Reed, of Poolesville, Md., wins the fourth award.

Tapioca Nut Pudding.

1-3 cup of minute tapioca
½ cup of sugar
½ cup of finely ground nut meats
¼ teaspoon of salt
2 egg yolks
4 cups of milk
1 teaspoon of vanilla
2 egg whites stiffly beaten

Combine the minute tapioca, sugar, salt, egg yolks and milk in the top of a double boiler. Stir enough to bread the egg yolks well. Place over rapidly boiling water and bring to a scalding point allowing 5 to 7 minutes.

Cook five minutes, stirring frequently. Remove from water and when partly cooked fold in finely ground nut meats (pecans or English walnuts) thoroughly. Then fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. When cold put in ice box to chill. This may be served with whipped cream, if desired.

Pecan Loaf Cake.

½ cup of shortening
1 cup of sugar
1 teaspoon of salt
½ teaspoon of nutmeg
1 teaspoon of cinnamon
3 eggs, separated
3 tablespoons of milk
2 cups of pastry flour
1½ teaspoons of baking powder
2 cups of pecans, broken

Cream the shortening, sugar and salt until soft and creamy. Beat in spices. Add beaten eggs, yolks, milk and nuts. Sift dry ingredients and add alternately with egg whites beaten stiff. Bake in a greased pan for 1½ hours in a moderate oven (350 degrees). Ice with your favorite icing.

Recipe for Date Torte Is Repeated at Request

It's an old-timer but so popular that requests keep pouring in for the favorite recipe—date torte.

Sift ½ cup flour, ⅛ teaspoon salt and 1 teaspoon baking powder together into mixing bowl. Mix 1 package pasteurized sliced dates and 1 cup chopped nuts through flour with finger tips. Beat 2 eggs, add ½ teaspoon vanilla and beat in ½ cup sugar, gradually; stir in flour, dates and nut mixture. Bake in a well-oiled shallow pan in slow oven (325 degrees F.) for 45 to 60 minutes. Remove from pan, cool, cut in squares and serve with whipped cream.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Nov. 26.

DOMESTIC affairs certainly do cut into the life of a girl who is trying to scratch up a living in the marts of trade, and affairs in my modest home are anything but an exception. The fundamental matter of trying to get home in time to dine with the husband before he goes crazy and bites the piano (Hell hath no fury like a hungry helpmate!) is now frightfully complicated with the affairs of the 5-year-old Martin.

The apartment house has been enriched by the recent arrival of two darling little girls, Nancy and Mary, 5 and 3, giving the old mausoleum three children as against 14 dogs of all breeds and sizes. Ah ha, thought I, fine playmates for the lad! But the other day, meeting the girls in the elevator, Mary confessed sadly that she thought it best to scratch Martin from her list, as he seemed to be a confirmed pigtail-puller and gravel-tosser. This called for action and got it.

Moreover, he is anything but a ball of fire in the morning. Yesterday it took him 20 minutes by the cuckoo clock to struggle into his underwear, and he seems to be a confirmed dreamer. So his habitual tardiness at the Hunter College model school draws short, sharp notes from his teacher, Miss Barry, which impel me to the laying on of hands. Add to this my constant worry that his play-hour in the fenced and locked Gramercy Park is going to train him in snobbism, and I wonder that I get any store-prowling and clothes-snooping done!

Reaching adopted motherhood rather late, I now stagger through a strange new world. Even though the spouse says he thinks Martin is boning the entrance exams to Alcatraz, I deny it, and work and hope for the best!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Frances Langford, the radio singer, is back in town after four lucrative years in Hollywood, and has us all pretty much confused. She is seen round and about with her old beau, George Jean Nathan, who writes, and yet credible reports say that her strongest heart-throb is a lad named Dolan. At any rate, she gets plenty of attention.

Our famous Stork Club, always alert in the matter of getting the debs in, is now taking screen tests of the socialasses at luncheon. Sherman Billingsley, its inspired boss, has another cute trick. He sees that every desirable deb never pays a lunch check of more than $1, which draws their Park avenue pals, and usually their parents, for dinner—to pay big checks! Clever? Incidentally, the Stork's sax player, named Bobby, is known on East Fifty-third street as the "Debs' Delight" because of his blond good looks and his sweet tootling . . .

As I've often said, our taxis are a major menace, since many of them are driven by graduates of the Indianapolis Speedway. But only now and then does one run amok, as happened right in Times Square the other day. This mad hack ran square into a crowd at a crossing, pinning three ladies against another car, breaking their legs. Do be careful when you're in town!

How lovely Constance Cummings has shot up in the play world! Once she was just atmosphere, and not much of that. Then we saw her as Harold Lloyd's leading lady. And the other evening I beheld her as the star of the proud Theater Guild's "Madame Bovary," a not too-happy dramatization of Flaubert's masterwork, but a great triumph for La Cummings! . . . But the show that has drawn the most huzzahs recently is a modern-dress version of "Julius Caesar." This exciting event may help make up to poor Bill Shakespeare for the "Antony and Cleopatra" flop. But it won't make poor Talloo Bankhead feel any more chipper!

How long is a good hat good, ladies? I don't mean practically, but stylishly and as a matter of head pride? Estelle Hamburger, brilliant vice president of one of our Gold Coast shops, says the fashion life of a first-rate hat is six weeks. After that, it is just something nice. Remember, Stella speaks only for the top-drawer dressers. My pet hat is still last winter's!

Geisha Girls Represent Zenith In Nippon Styles, Says Writer

The kimono is "the most flattering costume ever designed," in the opinion of Claudia Cranston, author, traveler and former fashion editor who has recently returned from a visit to Japan. Three geisha girls are shown above in late model kimonos.

Print of Famed Entertainers' Kimonos Varies From Year to Year, Says Claudia Cranston, Back From Six-Month Trip to Orient.

By Jean Brownell.

"HIGH STYLE" in Japanese fashions is represented by the country's famed geisha girls, according to Claudia Cranston, author and traveler who is visiting in Washington. Recently returned from a six-month visit in the Orient, Miss Cranston ran out of adjectives in trying to describe the colors and prints of the dancers' costumes.

"The pattern of the geisha's kimono is the same as that worn in Medieval times," she explained yesterday, "but the print varies from year to year. You can tell from the size and color of the print just how old the girl's kimono is, just as you can date a European gown by its cut."

At one party which Miss Cranston attended in Tokyo 125 geishas were hired to furnish entertainment. In addition to private engagements, they also appear in public performances much like our musical comedies.

Prejudice Breaking Down.

For centuries the geishas, who start training for their career at the age of 3, have been the only professional women in Japan. But conventional prejudice against women in business gradually is breaking down, Miss Cranston found. Already all buses and other public conveyances have women conductors. She met Shige Takenaka, the first woman journalist in Japan, who is an editor of the newspaper Asahi, with a circulation of 3,000,000.

"I'd meet a pretty but ineffective looking little doll at tea one afternoon," Miss Cranston said, "and next day see her coming out of a class in typewriting at the Y. W. C. A."

Scientific housekeeping is slowly being adopted in Japan, principally because the people are so unbelievably poor, Miss Cranston believes. No one ever thought of balancing receipts and expenditures until a girls' school in Tokyo instituted a course in budgeting.

"And would you believe it?" she exclaimed. "The first year the course was given, every graduate of the school had about 15 proposals of marriage."

Wives Must Keep Pace

Like the geisha girls, Japanese wives must keep up with the fashions. The saying that Japanese women carry their families' fortunes on their backs is almost literally true, Miss Cranston believes. A bride's trousseau sometimes consists of 200 kimonos; yet with the new season she must buy more.

"I was curious to find out what happens to cast-off kimonos," he said, "and was told that most of them end up in Paris as brocaded handbags."

The most beautiful costume a Japanese woman ever owns is her wedding kimono, and she wears that only two hours. Miss Cranston considers the kimono "the most flattering costume ever designed."

One of her most interesting experiences was a visit to one of the palatial homes of Mikimoto, "the pearl king." Known popularly as "the grand old man of Japan," Mikimoto inherited a fortune from his family, which has been manufacturing macaroni for centuries. To this wealth he added more by inventing the cultured pearl process.

Finders Keep Pearls.

"Every meal in Mikimoto's home starts off with a macaroni course, in tribute to the household gods," Miss Cranston related, "and every meal includes an oyster course, symbolizing the source of the Mikimoto wealth. Guests are given all the pearls they find in their oysters."

Miss Cranston herself discovered five or six, which she brought home to have made into a brooch. Mikimoto also gave her a gold ring with a pearl set in it. His culturing process consists of burying a seed pearl in an oyster, placing it in a wire cage and letting it remain in the sea for seven years.

Miss Cranston's most recent trip included stops in China, the Philippines, Java and Singapore. She describes her experiences in her newly published book, "I've Been Around." In addition to her travel books, she is widely known for her Good Housekeeping articles. While in Washington she is the guest of Mrs. L. H. Bentley, 3485 Holmead place northwest.

Today's HEALTH TALK

by Logan Clendening, M. D.

Irritable Colon Diet.

Spastic or irritable colon, which causes a general feeling of discomfort, with alternating diarrhea and constipation, and a general sense of nervousness, requires special dietetic planning. One is for a smooth diet. This means generally a low content of cellulose in the foodstuffs. Another feature that must be planned is reference to susceptibility of foodstuffs to putrefaction. With these two objects in mind, a selection of diet is not difficult.

The protein ration in the diet is probably best supplied by milk. Milk has little, or very little, indigestible residue, and it is protected to a large extent from the action of putrefactive bacteria by its carbohydrate, which is easily fermented by the nonputrefactive bacteria. Milk means not only milk itself, but also modifications of milk, the preparations of milk and its constituents. It may be mixed with many substances—water, cereal preparations, strained fruit juices. Thus milk and barley water, strained milk and oatmeal gruel, strained orange juice—the latter in sufficient quantity to curdle the milk in fine flakes on agitation—are all acceptable. Milk soups or cream soups, such as cream of tomato, celery, corn, etc., allow the use of vegetable extracts without their cellulose residue, which is not smooth.

Eggs are more liable to putrefactive action but they have a place in this diet on account of their freedom from insoluble residue and easy digestibility.

Cheese of nearly any kind is also acceptable.

Of the cereals, strained oatmeal gruel, cream of wheat, rice deprived of hulls, are comparatively smooth when boiled.

White bread, 24 or more hours old, especially when toasted, can be used.

All the sugars have a slightly laxative effect, but they are distinctly smooth articles of diet, and for this reason can be used—such as honey, molasses and brown sugar.

Among the fats, olive oil, butter and cream are all advised.

Fruits present a problem, but the banana is the most acceptable. It is rich in minerals and has good quantities of most of the vitamins; it is easily digestible and rates fairly high in the matter of "smoothness." Strained fruit, especially orange juice, tomato juice, grapefruit and pineapple juice are acceptable, whereas they may not always be digestible if taken whole. The pulp of a baked apple or a stewed apple is well borne by some.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a 3-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infants' Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Veal Salad Offers Delicious Repast

Resembles Chicken When Properly Prepared.

Veal salad, so carefully prepared that you are almost convinced you are eating chicken, is a grand dish for week-end menus. Moist tender roast veal is necessary for its preparation.

Veal Salad.

2 cups of cold cubed veal
2 cups of chopped orange sections
1 cup of chopped celery
1 cup of seedless grapes
½ cup of toasted almonds
2 tablespoons of lemon French dressing.

Cut the celery and veal in small cubes. Blend with the orange sections and French dressing. Let marinate for at past 30 minutes. Add the seedless grape halves and serve in a salad bowl with lettuce leaves. Sprinkle toasted almonds over the top.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

VOGUES come and go, and that for the curvesome Mae West figure has gone. There is no doubt about it, too ample curves are aging and the modern woman will have no avoirdupois, thank you!

Credit is due Miss West. She helped restore figures to normal. After the fashion of reformers, Mae West swung to the other extreme, and provided a delightful change from the scrawny vogue. She made us realize how frightfully angular we were.

There always has been a suspicion in my mind that the enthusiasm for the Westward curves was promoted largely by the buxom social blonde. She certainly showed how to get away with a few excess pounds!

Ideal Supple and Slim.

Today's ideal, however, is supple, and slim, giving the appearance of agelessness. Curves, but those of beautifully toned muscles, not excess fat. The waitline is trim, hips are molded and the bust high and firm. This is the figure you might have by accident at 18, but which you have only by exercise at 30.

James Montgomery Flagg, the artist, said any girl can have a beautiful figure at 20, but it is the woman of 40 who deserves credit.

When you add an excess inch to your waistline you add two years to your figure. The youthful figure has a seven to nine-inch difference between bust measurement and the waistline. The hipline should not be more than three inches larger than the bust measurement. If your weight is within 10 per cent of normal and you have these proportions, you have a lovely figure.

Streamlines mean curves, not angles, and normal weight, not underweight. The underweight needs more milk and rest, and the overweight needs fewer desserts and fats . . . both need exercise.

Position: Down on the floor on the hands and knees.

Movement: Raise the right leg and the left arm and stretch them straight out from the body. Elevate the leg as high as possible and stretch as far as you can reach—then stretch a little farther. This exercise tugs at the waistline and flattens the tummy, and firms muscles about the hips.

Mrs. Roosevelt Finishing Her Christmas Shopping

First Lady Has Only a Few More Gifts to Buy, She Says on Return From Lecture Tour in the Midwest.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Mrs. Roosevelt is one person not worrying about how many more shopping days there are until Christmas. In keeping with her custom, she purchased the bulk of her presents before Thanksgiving. "I've only a few more to buy," she said yesterday at her first press conference since she returned from her lecture tour in the Middle West.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Furthermore, Christmas plans of the White House family have been completed down to the last notch. Santa Claus will make his appearance in the same manner and at the same time as he has each year since the Roosevelts have lived in the Executive Mansion.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., will visit the White House during the holidays, John Roosevelt will be there, and Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt and their daughters will be present for most of the merry-making. Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt and Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger, however, are not expected to be in Washington at that time.

Incidentally, yuletide parties will have a more suitable setting in the East Room this year than formerly since the new Italian red (just plain crimson) brocaded curtains have been hung. Press women got their first peep at them yesterday.

Talk turned from Christmas plans to comments on her recent trip. Mrs. Roosevelt spoke of the latter as being "uneventful and rather peaceful." She said she observed the rural districts were comparatively "unruffled" by current conditions, while industrial centers where work opportunities are being reduced were considerably "disturbed."

Either today or tomorrow, the indefatigable First Lady will be off on another trip—this time a short one. She plans to motor to Arthurdale, W. Va., and will go from there to New York City, returning to Washington on Monday, December 6.

On Tuesday of next week she will be guest at a luncheon at the Woman Pays Club, where she will present a copy of her forthcoming book, "This Troubled World," to Carrie Chapman Catt, woman's suffrage leader and peace worker to whom it is dedicated. Later that day Mrs. Roosevelt will make a brief appearance at the Dance International exhibition at Radio City. Wednesday, she will open her class at the Todhunter School at a luncheon at the Junior League headquarters.

According to present plans, Mrs. Roosevelt will return to the White House on Tuesday, December 7. The following day she will entertain the Cabinet hostesses at a luncheon when plans for Cabinet days at home for the season will be discussed. By way of winding up her social schedule for that day she will have two teas—one for women executives in Government departments; the other for an unofficial group of friends.

In the course of yesterday's conference, Mrs. Roosevelt mentioned having visited the rural arts exhibit at the Department of Agriculture and pronounced it "extraordinarily significant." In answer to a query regarding whether she had received many letters from readers of her autobiography, she said she had—also, a flood of requests for autographs. Since a special autographed edition has been placed on sale by her publishers, she is writing inscriptions only in copies owned by her intimate friends. And even that practice is to be curtailed until after the holidays.

Miss Hardiman Is Married Here

Large Ceremony Is Held at Presbyterian Church in Chevy Chase.

At a large wedding which took place at the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church last evening at 8 o'clock, Miss Sannye Elizabeth Hardiman, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William E. Hardiman, of Baltimore, became the bride of Ralph I. Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Francis Williams, of Washington. The Rev. R. Paul Schearrer officiated. White chrysanthemums, palms and candles formed a lovely setting for the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her uncle, M. H. B. Hoffman, the bride was in white satin fashioned along princess lines, with a square neck and long sleeves. Her veil of white tulle fell from a satin headpiece and she also wore a face veil. White roses and lilies of the valley formed her shower bouquet.

Other attendants were Mrs. James Welsh, of Baltimore, and Miss Norma Lorenz, of Coshocton, Ohio, both of whom wore rust moire trimmed in brown velvet; and Miss June Wilcoxon, of this city, and Miss Gertrude Chesnut, of Hyattsville, Md., who were in gold moire.

Laurence Williams served as best man. The ushers were David Krupsaw, Herbert Allison and Marshall Mathias, all of Washington; Warren Tydings, of Knoxville, Md.; William C. H. Needham, of Baltimore, and Charles Briddell, of Crisfield, Md.

Those assisting the bride and the bridegroom in receiving the guests at the rear of the church following the ceremony were Mrs. M. H. B. Hoffman, of Hyattsville, and Mrs. R. U. Darby, of Baltimore, aunts of the bride.

On their return from their wedding trip, the couple will make their home at 610 Arundel avenue, College Park, Md.

Both are graduates of the University of Maryland. Mrs. Williams is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority and Mr. Williams is a member of Theta Chi.

I., and Lady Milne of Dildawn, Woldingham, Surrey.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard formerly resided in Washington, and Miss Howard attended school here.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

PROGRESSIVE Bennington College having been the subject of quite a bit of interesting publicity lately, it was fun to meet one of the students in person yesterday. She is Miss Jane Acheson, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Atcheson, who was presented to society at a tea at the home of her parents, 2805 P street in Georgetown.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Miss Acheson's major at college—all Bennington students are required to concentrate on one particular subject almost as soon as they enter—is psychology. According to the college plan of allowing a certain amount of time every year for field work, the debutante will return to Washington this winter for two months of practical research in her chosen field. Exactly what kind of a job she will take is as yet undecided.

* * * *

YESTERDAY, looking very much like a debutante and not at all like a student, Miss Acheson received with her mother in the drawing room of their home. She wore a long gown of cafe au lait satin, with a diamond clip in her dark hair, and carried a sheaf of talisman roses. Mrs. Acheson chose a fuchsia dress, with which she wore gold slippers and a gold necklace.

Mr. Acheson having been at one time Undersecretary of the Treasury, there were a number of people in official life there yesterday, as well as the cave dwellers who are more rarely visible. Lady Lindsay, doyenne of the Capital Diplomatic Corps, was accompanied by Miss Irene Boyle, who poured tea for a while. Then there were the Irish Minister and Mrs. Michael MacWhite, Mrs. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce; Mrs. Homer Cummings, the Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos, and the Charge d'Affaires of The Netherlands legation and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg.

* * * *

"AMERICAN DEBUTANTES are very lucky," said Count van Rechteren. "In Holland only the most energetic parents get around to giving their daughters a party."

The Acheson home is one of the most lovely in Washington, with its walls tinted a pale green and its early American furniture. Yesterday the garden had been covered with a canopy, making an extra room, so that one didn't have that "ganged-up-on" feeling customary at some parties.

To mention only some of the guests—there were the Norwegian Minister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, Mrs. David Finley, Mrs. Richard Wilmer, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Parker, Mrs. Richard Oulahan, Mrs. Nathan Wyeth and Mrs. Edmund Pavenstedt, who poured tea for a while; Mr. and Mrs. Francis DeWolfe, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Ross, Frau Herbert Scholz, Miss Margot Garrett, Miss Alice Barry, Miss Barbara Bradley and Miss Louise Burke, debutantes, who assisted; Maj. and Mrs. David Barry, Mrs. Higginson Rogers, the Rumanian Minister, Charles Davila, and the Swedish Minister and Mme. Bostrom; Miss Adele Smith, Sherlock Davis, Hugh Wise and many, many more.

LATER TO A combination cocktail party and christening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Darlington. The christening of their young son, Charles Darlington 3d, had been held earlier, with Mr. and Mrs. Philip Bastedo—she is a sister of Lucius Wilmerding—standing as godparents. The Bastedos are in town for the holidays from New York, and it was for them and for Mr. and Mrs. Winston Elting that the party was held. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cotton, of New York, were also to have been honor guests, but at the last moment decided on a hunting trip to the Geneseo Valley rather than a return to Washington.

The party was very gay, yet small enough so that the guests could find a comfortable place to sit and relax. Mr. and Mrs. Elting, who are staying with the Darlingtons, will be joined today by his brother, John Elting, who has many friends here.

Miss Gebauer Is Wed in West

Adrian Archbold and His Bride Will Make Home in Manhattan.

The ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. E. George Ferguson, was attended only by relatives and close friends.

Immediately after their wedding, the couple left for New York, where they will embark January 6 on a world cruise. On their return they will live in Manhattan.

Mr. Archbold was graduated from the University of Arizona, and Mrs. Archbold, a musician, studied at Oberlin Conservatory and in Munich and Vienna.

Marian Sharpe, Mr. Turley Wed

Miss Marian Sharpe, daughter of Mrs. Emily D. Grimm, of Takoma Park, D. C., and William B. Sharpe, of New York, was married yesterday afternoon to Holmes C. Turley, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Turley, of Coldwater, Miss., in a service at Washington Cathedral.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of ivory silk made with short puffed sleeves and a full skirt. Her Juliet cap of white velvet was trimmed with a shoulder-length veil and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses, lilies of the valley and gardenias.

Mrs. William J. Power, of Fort Myer, Va., who was the only attendant, wore royal blue velvet fashioned on princess lines and a matching turban trimmed with gold thread. Her flowers were small bronze chrysanthemums.

On their return from a wedding trip the couple will live at 1316 Floral street.

The bride attended Friends' School in Washington and the Manch Seminary, Staunton, Va., and studied for three years at the National Art School. Mr. Turley, a graduate of the University of Mississippi, is a member of the Tennessee Bar Association.

Mrs. Hutchison Is Honor Guest at Tea Given Here

Charles Mason Remey entertained at tea Thanksgiving Day at his home on Massachusetts avenue in honor of Mrs. Benjamin F. Hutchison, of Marcy, N. Y., whose husband, the late Rear Admiral Benjamin F. Hutchison, at one time was commandant of the Washington Navy Yard.

Mrs. Hutchison is well-known in Washington, where for several winters she has had an apartment at the Shoreham. This season, however, she is making only a brief visit here on her way to Beaufort, S. C., where she and her sister, Miss Gertrude Weaver, and her brother, George Weaver, have taken a house for the winter.

Among the guests present at the tea were Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, Admiral and Mrs. William D. Leahy and others from official and residential circles.

Mrs. Allen Is Wed To Kent Mullikin

Mr. Mullikin, graduate of Johns Hopkins, has served as Representative in the Maryland Legislature for the past ten years and is Democratic floor leader of the House of Delegates.

Morrises Have 18th Century Party at Home

Atmosphere of 1754 Reproduced on Kalorama Road.

Guests who were present at the housewarming given by Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris in their home at 2401 Kalorama road had to pinch themselves several times in order to be sure they hadn't stepped backward 200 years (like a new-fangled Alice) when they stepped over the threshold last night.

The house, originally called The Lindens, was built in Danvers, Mass., in 1754, and last year the Morrises started to move it down, lock, stock and roof, to its present location in Washington.

The party carried out the eighteenth century atmosphere right down to the last "t." Invitations were printed in old type on old-fashioned paper. A string quartet played ballads popular in the big-wig days of Colonial times. On the buffet, among the spoils garnered from ancient recipe books, were Banbury tarts (from Banbury Cross?), maple sugar rolls, and, crowning glory of all, Fishhouse punch, a rollicking concoction devised from a recipe created in an inspired moment by Capt. Samuel Morris, of Philadelphia, in honor of Capt. Charles Ross.

Mr. Macomber Helps Receive

Receiving with the Morrises was Walter Mayo Macomber, the architect, who adapted The Lindens for its new role in Washington and who was also resident architect in charge of the recent reconditioning of Colonial Williamsburg.

Mrs. Morris, wearing ivory brocaded damask, was assisted by members of the Junior League, who helped to explain the eighteenth century features of the house. The leaguers who acted as "guides" were Miss Anne Carter Green, Mrs. William Langhorne Bond, Mrs. John Farr Simmons, Mrs. James S. Taylor, Mrs. Richard Jewett, Miss Rosalind Wright and Miss Miriam McGarvey.

Among the guests invited to last evening's reception were the British Ambassador and Lady Lindsay, Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, the Canadian Minister and Lady Marler, the Austrian Minister and Mme. Prochnik, the Minister of Greece, Demetrius Sicilianos; the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Stone, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Woodring, the Attorney General and Mrs. Cummings, the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Roper and the Secretary of Labor, Miss Perkins.

Methodist Home for Aged Scene of Gay Interchurch Party As Annual Donation Day Fete Assures Supplies for Winter

Residents and Visitors Mingle at Tables Offering Needlework for Sale; District Supreme Court Sends 150 Jars of Fruit.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Flowers from the White House decorated the drawing room of the Methodist Home for the Aged yesterday and the tables piled high with gifts of canned goods and staple groceries transformed the dining room into a harvest festival scene for the annual donation day conducted by the board of lady managers.

Mrs. Harry Hoskinson, president of the board; Mrs. Edwin Waite, general chairman of the fete, and a large committee of helpers were there from 3 in the afternoon until 10 o'clock at night, greeting guests, receiving contributions and presiding at booths which had lively patronage.

The donation day brought gifts of food, linens and money for the home which will practically maintain it until spring. It is one of several Methodist institutions in Washington, none of which is in the Community Chest, depending instead on support of the Methodist churches in the District and friends interested in the work carried on.

Members of the home family were as interested and active in helping with Donation Day plans as were the board and committee members. For many weeks they have been making articles for the "fancy table" which was conducted under chairmanship of Mrs. Ivan Riley, assisted by Mrs. N. B. Frye and Miss Willie English, of the home. Mrs. Frye has been in charge of distribution of materials for articles which residents of the home volunteered to make. These included aprons, sets of table cloths and napkins, crocheted doilies, handkerchiefs, laundry bags, cushions, a handsome crocheted bedspread and a patchwork quilt in a fan pattern.

Reading Circle Conducts Booths

The Reading Circle which was originally started by a group of church women for the purpose of reading to the residents of the home but now arranges monthly programs for their entertainment instead, had two booths for support of its work. One was a handkerchief and apron booth in charge of Mrs. Irving E. Strobel, assisted by Mrs. George S. Kraft, and the other a candy booth, decorated with apple blossoms, which was in charge of Mrs. Howell Bartle, assisted by Mrs. Clara Wollard, Mrs. J. Q. Slye and Mrs. W. E. McReynolds.

A program in the afternoon was presented by Caroline Nordica Borst, a Washington concert artist who is a lineal cousin of the great Nordica. She sang a group of songs, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Ralph N. Wolfe who was in charge of the program, assisted by Mrs. John A. Smith. An accordionist also entertained informally and, in the evening, there was a concert by the Police Boys' Club Band.

Mrs. Borst's mother, Mrs. Libbie Norton, was among those who attended the afternoon program as were her teacher, Mrs. H. O. Swindler, and Major Swindler. Major Swindler's mother, Mrs. Marietta Busbie, who was for many years a missionary in India, has just come to the home to reside.

Bishop James Hughes also was there in the afternoon, accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. W. S. Harban, and, among others, were Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, Dr. G. Ellis Williams, district superintendent of the church, Mrs. Williams and Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Burgan.

Justice O'Donoghue Sends Donation

One of the gifts received in the morning was 150 jars of fruit sent by Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, with a card saying it was from the District Supreme Court. The Southern Methodist Home in Gaithersburg, Md., also sent a generous contribution of canned fruits and vegetables and tables in the dining room piled high with food gave testimony of generosity of the various churches in the District.

There were also a cake and an ice cream table which guests patronized for refreshments. Mrs. G. G. Loeffler was chairman, assisted by Mrs. Charlotte Hicks and Miss Barry Black at the cake table and Mrs. Rexford Cleaveland, Mrs. Harry Sullivan and Mrs. Ruth McCullom at the ice cream table.

In an east parlor, tea was served, with Mrs. George Middleton in charge. Centerpiece for the tea table was a basket piled with fruit and tied with a bronze and gold ribbon. The table was lighted with white candles in silver candle sticks and pine branches and pine cones, suggestive of the approach of the Christmas season, were used around the base of the basket, on the mantel and about the fireplace.

Assisting were members of the Methodist Ministers Wives Association. They included Mrs. Robert Wood, Mrs. G. Ellis Williams, Mrs. John R. Edwards, Mrs. Burgan, Mrs. James Luther Neff, Mrs. Reginald Heber Stone and Mrs. Ralph Smith, who poured. Also assisting were Mrs. William Keese, Mrs. J. Martin Gillum, Mrs. W. W. Roland, Mrs. George Bennett, Mrs. Smith Chism, a bride of last summer; Mrs. Walter Michael, Mrs. Edward Latch and Mrs. Frank Steelman.

Mrs. J. E. Barnes was chairman of the reception committee and Miss Mae Farmer, one of the residents of the home, assisted in receiving guests at the door.

Mrs. Oliver B. Jenkins, who was chairman of the publicity committee for the affair, has served in that capacity for 13 years and was, for the same length of time, corresponding secretary for the board of lady managers as well as a member of the building committee and chairman of the furnishing committee for the home.

Churches which contributed to the donation day and secretaries in charge of receiving gifts were: Brookland, Mrs. W. A. Roberts, secretary; Calvary, Mrs. Emma R. Earle; Camp Springs, Mrs. Charles C. Wilcox; Douglas, Mrs. Katie E. Gross; Dumbarton, Mrs. Daniel Johnson; Eldbrooke, Mrs. L. L. Derrick; Foundry, Mrs. S. M. Stellwagon; Gorsuch, Mrs. W. F. Taylor; Hamline, Mrs. Ivan Riley; Langdon, Mrs. C. E. Senen; Lincoln Road, Mrs. John Rodgers; McKendree, Mrs. Fred J. Kohlman; Metropolitan, Mrs. C. Willard Camalier; Petworth, Mrs. James A. 1,000 Members Set as Goal for Bishop's Guild

Bishop Freeman Outlines Aim at Tea Held at College of Preachers.

One thousand members is the goal set for the Bishop's Guild of National Cathedral by Bishop James E. Freeman, who was host to the guild at tea yesterday following its fall meeting. Its present membership of about 200 includes many of the women who joined when the organization was started 30 years ago by Bishop Satterlee, the first Bishop of Washington.

Bishop Freeman hopes to bring into the guild a large number of the younger women of the church and to assign them special work in connection with some of the historical rural parishes in the diocese.

The guild met yesterday in the chapel of Joseph of Arimathea, where both the bishop and Dean Noble Powell spoke. Later the members of the society were welcomed by Bishop and Mrs. Freeman at tea, which was served in the College of Preachers—usually a men's domain and seldom opened to women guests. The tea was in honor of Dean Powell, to give the guild members opportunity to meet the new dean of the cathedral.

About 100 were present, including Miss Mary B. Cox, the secretary; Mrs. Charles F. Roberts, the treasurer, and several new members who have already been admitted. The business meeting, at which reports will be given by committee chairmen and heads of the various Episcopal institutions maintained in this diocese, will be held next spring.

They expect to feel like strangers in the Mount Pleasant Library, where they will assemble December 1 at the usual hour, with Mrs. Thomas Law as leader. It just won't seem like home.

National Capital was the first chapter organized among the 15 which now are included in the society in Washington. Mrs. Maud Huntley is field secretary for the Delphians of the District.

She came here as a law clerk for the late Senator Walsh, remaining in his office until December, 1928, when she received an appointment as principal attorney for the Federal Communications Commission. Since that time she has gained the enviable position of principal attorney of the litigation section in the law department of the broadcasting division.

Kentucky Society Plans Ball Tuesday

The Kentucky Society in Washington will open its season with a dance Tuesday evening in the Willard Hotel ballroom. A feature of the entertainment will be a real "country fair" with square dances, a baby show, palmistry and booths with interesting exhibits of Kentucky-made products.

Mrs. H. G. Edmunds, president of the society, has engaged a "hill billy" orchestra to play the square dances. Fifty prizes will be awarded during the evening, ranging all the way from home-made pies and cakes to live turkeys, chickens and ducks.

Dancing will start promptly at 9:30. After the square dances are over a popular "swing" orchestra will take over the music and play during the rest of the evening.

The society's guests of honor will be Senator Alban W. Barkley, Judge Allen Gullion, Judge Advocate General (designate) and Thomas Haymond, Kentucky member of the Bituminous Coal Commission.

National Historical Magazine Shows the Skill of Mrs. Keyes

D. A. R. Official Organ Appears With New Title on Cover and Broad Selection of Material; Mrs. Becker Writes Editorial.

The skilled hand of Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes is evident in the December issue of the new National Historical Magazine, published by the Daughters of the American Revolution. It is the official organ of the D. A. R. with a new title on the cover and material inside to justify its name.

In the front, opposite the table of contents, is the "Prayer of An Editor," by Mrs. Keyes, which she read before the first fall meeting of the magazine committee of the District D. A. R., soon after she became editor. It was received with instant enthusiasm and so many requests that it be published she finally agreed to use it in a future issue of the magazine.

The cover design is "The Nativity," from a painting at the Abbaye des Benedictines, Oesterhout, Holland, appropriate for the Christmas number. Editorials include one by the President General, Mrs. William A. Becker, on "The Unknown Madonna," illustrated by a reproduction of a painting of the "Madonna and Child which is so identified because authorities have not been able to place it as the work of any certain master.

There is also a discussion of "Christianity and Communism" by Victoria Booth Demarest, granddaughter of Gen. Booth, founder of the Salvation Army, and herself a leader and writer of note.

Among the feature articles is one by Ellen S. Woodward, assistant administrator of the Works Progress Administration, entitled "Allies in Aims—The Story of What Ameri a is Doing ... Preserve Its Historical Heritage." It is illustrated with artistic pictures of historic places before and after their restoration by the WPA.

Corinne Reid Frazier is author of an article on Ephraim McDowell, frontier physician, who blazed a trail in medical history. Ruth Bradley Sheldon, State regent of the Philippines, contributes one on "Old Churches of Manila." Edith Harlan is author of a short story, "Behind the Lines," with its setting in Maryland and Virginia, a story which Mrs. Keyes described as "a touching little tale of the eve of Washington's resignation from the Army." It is illustrated with silhouettes by a young artist—Patricia Smith Frankenburg.

The national chairman of approved schools for the D. A. R., Katherine Matthies, has written of these institutions in an article accompanied by photographs showing the children at Tamassee and the new recreation hall and tower recently dedicated at the Kate Duncan Smith School on Gunther Mountain in Alabama.

There are also pictures and an account of the Navy Day celebration at Annapolis. Under a photograph of Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, wife of Senator Vandenberg, is the announcement she will write a series of articles on current events in Washington, beginning with the January issue. Further on is a section devoted to regular departments, "Contributors, Collaborators and Critics," in which the editor tells facts of interest concerning the contributors to the magazine and their work. Genealogy, book reviews, motion pictures, State conferences, committee reports, new items, the junior D. A. R. and the C. A. R. all come in for a share of attention.

The Daughters of the American Revolution, in fact, find in their new historical magazine a review of history of the past and an alert handling of matters of current interest, combined in a publication which is a complete departure from the limited field of a periodical catering only to members of one society.

Moose Women Appoint Two Chapter Guides

Miss Mitchell, Mrs. Wagner Are Honored; Shower Also Is Held.

Miss Margaret Mitchell and Mrs. Anna Wagner were appointed guides of Columbia Chapter, Women of the Moose, last night in Moose Hall. The senior regent, Mrs. Robert Baldwin, announced the appointments. She said the new guides would be installed at the chapter's first meeting in January.

A feature of last night's session was a shower for the aged at Moosehaven by members of the chapter and a reading on "Thanksgiving" by Mrs. Calvin Giles, junior regent.

The Moosehaven chairman, Mrs. E. T. Deegan, a past regent, announced a display of articles to be included in the Christmas box being sent to Moosehaven by her committee would be shown at the next meeting of the chapter, December 10. At the same time there will be an exhibition of gifts being prepared by Mrs. Emil Rada, Moosehart chairman, and her committee for the children at Dixie Hall in Moosehart who are proteges of Columbia Chapter.

Mrs. Calvin Giles, chairman of social service, reported last night that several baskets of food had been prepared and distributed on Thanksgiving to families whose names were given by the lodge and chapter.

The story and game hour at the Children's Emergency Home of the Central Union Mission tomorrow afternoon will be conducted by the child care and training chairman, Mrs. Samuel Miller, with Mrs. Hans Sorenson, past regent, assisting.

The ritualistic committee will hold its rehearsal on Monday evening at 8 o'clock at Moose Hall, 1414 I street northwest, instead of on Thursday, December 2, as previously scheduled. This rehearsal is to prepare for initiation of a class of candidates in honor of Grand Dame of Veteran Women of the Moose Mrs. Mary Hooper, of Baltimore. The class is sponsored by the Moosehaven and membership committees of the chapter.

The publicity committee will meet at Moose Hall on Tuesday at 8 p. m. to prepare and issue the chapter Monthly News Bulletin.

A bingo party will be held Friday evening, December 3, by the Annapolis Marching Club of Columbia Lodge and Chapter at Moose Hall beginning at 8:30.

The affair is being given by the debutante's mother, Mrs. Eugene W. Ong.

Prof. Edgerton, Vinson Named Appeals Judges

been named this year. They are Vinson, Edgerton and Justin Miller, who was appointed to succeed the late Justice Josiah A. Van Orsdel. Former law professor and special assistant to the Attorney General, Miller took his oath on August 30. He is 49.

The fourth Democratic member of the court is Harold M. Stephens, named by President Roosevelt in 1935. Stephens, who is 51, was Assistant Attorney General of the United States for two years prior to his appointment to the appeals court.

Justice Groner is slated to fill the vacancy on the United States Court of Appeals for the District caused by the retirement in September of Chief Justice George Ewing Martin, who held the post 13 years. Appointed United States district judge for the Eastern District of Virginia by President Harding in 1921, Groner was elevated to the District Court of Appeals by President Hoover a decade later. Between 1904 and 1920, Groner was a delegate to five Republican national conventions.

A native of Norfolk, Va., Groner is 54 years old. He was educated at Washington and Lee and the University of Virginia. In 1934, he married Mrs. Marion Edwards Shouse, former wife of Jouett Shouse, executive chairman of the Democratic National Committee during the Smith-Raskob regime.

Justice Groner is the grandson, on his maternal side, of Justice John A. Campbell, of the United States Supreme Court.

If confirmed by the Senate as associate justice of the court, Kentucky's Frederick Moore Vinson will be a strong New Deal addition to the ranks of the judiciary. Outstanding House authority on tax questions, Vinson is chairman of the House Ways and Means subcommittee on taxation.

Although Vinson refused to comment on his nomination last night, it is believed that he will not resign from the House before the tax bill now being whipped into shape is ready for presentation to Congress.

Co-author of the Guffey-Vinson coal act which was invalidated by the Supreme Court, Vinson is a stanch believer in a liberal interpretation of the Constitution.

Born in Louisa, Ky., 47 years ago, Vinson has been a Democratic member of the House since 1923, except for the Seventy-first Congress (1928-29). He was educated at Centre College, Danville, and was city attorney and later Commonwealth attorney for the Thirty-second judicial district of of Kentucky before entering national politics. He now represents the Eighth Congressional District of Kentucky. His home is at Ashland.

Edgerton Is Kansan.

Nominated to succeed Justice Groner as associate justice, Henry White Edgerton was professor of law at the George Washington University from 1921 to 1927. After a short interval as visiting professor at the University of Chicago, he was appointed to Cornell in 1929. He served as special assistant to the United States Attorney General in 1934-35.

Edgerton, who is 49, was born at Rush Center, Kans. He received his education at the University of Wisconsin, Cornell, University of Paris and Harvard and practiced in private law offices for seven years before coming to George Washington.

Senior Judge of the Police Court John P. McMahon was first appointed by President Wilson in 1918 and was reappointed in 1924 by Coolidge and six years later by Hoover.

The only native-born Washingtonian among the four police judges, McMahon is 58 years old. Graduated from the George Washington University law school in 1905, he entered private practice. After serving a short time as assistant United States attorney, he was appointed judge of the Municipal Court in 1917.

McMahon, whose reappointment has been in doubt since the expiration of his term last March, said yesterday that he expected to take the oath of office shortly, if the Senate confirms his appointment.

Roosevelt Lists 5-Point Plan to Combat Slump

Says He's Ready to Allow Congress to Revise Tax on Business.

"3. Stimulate production and employment in heavy industries by taking measures to prevent postponement of justifiable plans for plant expansion and purchase of new equipment and to encourage building of all types. Special measures are needed to make credit available to business, for many programs which would provide employment are being postponed because credit cannot be secured.

"4—Prepare for prompt payment of unemployment compensation which begins in 22 States in January and will be an important addition to workers' buying power.

"5—Take measures to promote business confidence.

"6—Improve relations between employers and employes (a) employers, by recognizing unions and negotiating with them; (b) union members, wherever a satisfactory collective bargaining relationship exists, by co-operating to cut costs by improving efficiency."

Roosevelt Following Trend.

Although this program was general in its proposals, it is notable that President Roosevelt had been moving in the direction urged by the A. F. of L. His drive has been to stimulate railroad, utilities and housing construction as an aid to the heavy industries by seeking to restore confidence and cordial relations between his Administration and business and by seeking to make credit available for housing construction.

In his declaration regarding revision of the undistributed profits and capital gains taxes, the President again indicated, more forcefully, however, than previously, that he will not be a stumbling block in the removal of these harassments to business, even though he will not take the initiative.

Makes Sarcastic Plea.

The orders issued by the President for the immediate purchase of needed supplies will not add to the total of this fiscal year's budget. They merely will speed up Government buying of needed supplies which otherwise would take place over the next six months.

In this way, Mr. Roosevelt hopes directly to assist industry in keeping its plant going and its pay rolls up until the proposed housing and utility construction programs can play their parts. As far as the utilities are concerned, his endeavor is chiefly one of persuading their managements that Government competition is not as great a threat as believed, and that expansion programs profitably can be carried out at this time.

The President's drive to encourage needed expansion by utilities is commencing to bear fruit. Floyd L. Carlisle, chairman of the Consolidated Edison and Niagara Hudson companies, after a conference with the President Wednesday, announced he would push at once the possibilities of a $100,000,000 program.

The Northern States Power Co., of Minnesota, yesterday filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission plans for a $9,000,000 construction program for the period from October 1 last to December 31, 1938. The company will borrow $4,000,00 of this sum in exchange for 3 per cent notes, using $5,000,000 from earnings and cash on hand.

Of the $9,000,000 to be spent, $3,257,300 will be expended by the Northern States Power Co. and $5,644,700 by the Minneapolis General Power Co. The remainder will be spent by other affiliatd companies

The finishing touches have been placed on the President's housing message and it would have gone to Congress yesterday had the House been in session. Although the President will not be here Monday, it will go to Capitol Hill on that day and House and Senate committees are expected to commence at once the recommended revision of the F.H.A. act. The objective is to stimulate private enterprise in home construction for both sale and rental on a large scale.

The President's recommendations regarding highway expenditures will not affect the current budget but they will pave the way, through proposed legislative changes, in reducing the existing Federal aid to States for road building from around $200,000,000 annually to about $90,000,000. This would restore the Federal help to the pre-depression basis. As a recovery measure the States were given additional sums in recent years.

The reason Mr. Roosevelt must ask for a revision of the Federal-aid highway law at this time is that authorizing legislation specifies the amount which must be carried in the budget for that purpose, and requires allocation of the money by January 1 of each year. Thus it is not only a case of reducing the figure in appropriation bills but action must be taken before December 31 to prevent the Treasury from becoming obligated.

House Committee Indicates Tax Relief Bill Can't Be Readied in Time for This Session

action unless the President definitely favored such a course.

But Mr. Roosevelt made clear to reporters that he did not want to fly in the face of critical editorials of the past which warned against undigested legislation and White House listing of bills for Congressional rubber stamping.

Passes Onus to Congress.

Emphasizing that all legislation should be thoroughly considered, the President left the impression that although he favored modifications, tax revision entirely up to Congress without "must" instructions from him.

His statement followed a direct question on whether the President is for tax revision as an aid to business now. Mr. Roosevelt jocularly asked if his questioner had been reading the newspapers. He said he made very clear in his message to Congress that tax revision was desired.

Commenting on the White House tax statement, Representative Allen T. Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee, said:

"When the President is for a matter, he is very generous in his views. But when he is on the other side of the fence, he wants Congress to take the responsibility. I am perfectly willing to accept my share."

Then Treadway went on the radio to demand immediate repeal by Congress of the undivided profits tax as "unsound and injurious" legislation.

Leaders Hold Conferences.

The President's tax statement also caused a stir among Democrats at the capitol. Conferences among House and Senate leaders followed. Word went around that Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the Ways and Means committee, would have a statement at 5 o'clock.

In the late afternoon, Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley told reporters:

"It is my understanding that the Ways and Means committee has decided there is not time in the special session to revise these taxes, and it will issue a statement to that effect today."

The Ways and Means subcommittee held morning and afternoon sessions, and, about 4 o'clock, subcommittee Democrats met alone in closed conference. Following the conference Chairman Doughton announced only that no statement would be issued. Representative Vinson disclosed, only new tax law changes that had been under consideration.

Senate Hopes Set Back.

Both Vinson and Doughton have repeatedly taken the view that modifications in both undivided profits and capital gains taxes already voted should be sufficient assurance to business that the levies will be modified, if it needs that assurance to go forward.

Earlier yesterday special session tax action was dealt a setback by the declaration of Senator Frederick Van Nuys, Indiana Democrat and co-author of the Wagner-Van Nuys antilynching bill, that, after farm bill passage antilynching legislation will be held continuously before Congress until passed.

The antilynching measure automatically becomes the Senate special order after farm bill action, and tax revision could not be considered unless the prior bill is displaced. One group of Senators may attempt a coup to lay aside the antilynching bill and make tax revision a "rider" on a minor revenue bill now pending in the Senate.

As opposed to the Van Nuys statement, Chairman Pat Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee, an advocate of quick tax action, indicated the Senate was waiting only for the House to act first.

Senate Won't Delay Bill.

"If and when the House passes the bill," said Harrison, "there will be no unnecessary delay in the Senate in passing it. We have, of course, to look into what we are doing, but our disposition is to expedite consideration as rapidly as possible."

One House possibility held out last night was that the Ways and Means Committee might hold hearings on the change in December, affording business a chance to have its day in court.

The sub-committee's task was rendered more difficult yesterday by definite word that any additional taxes needed to finance the farm program must be raised by this group, as House and Senate Agriculture committees have failed to act. This means that, in addition to possible revenue losses from tax modification, the committee may have to launch further search for new revenue.

Tax Problem Studied.

Chairman Vinson disclosed the sub-committee considered the following tax questions at yesterday's meetings:

Received from Treasury experts historical data on estate and gift taxes enacted in 1935 and discussed a possible "pick up" in revenue on these schedules.

Considered simplification of present dual methods of appealing tax assessments, through the courts and through the board of tax appeals, and eliminating duplicating work by Government legal staffs.

Considered declaratory rulings in advance by the Internal Revenue Commissioner, which could be followed by the taxpayer in making his return, with assurance the Government would abide by the advance ruling.

Discussed giving undivided profits taxpayers 60 to 90 days after a deficiency assessment in which to distribute dividends equal to the items disallowed, without tax penalty.

Discussed statute of limitations and methods of clarifying it.

Previously it was learned that the sub-committee has abandoned its plan to allow corporations subject to the undivided profits tax to carry over their losses into the second year, to be applied against any income they might make in that year. The change was made to prevent a loss of $83,900,000 to the Treasury.

Doctor Charges U. S. Made Use of Deaths by 'Elixir'

Bristol, Tenn., Nov. 26 (AP).—Dr. S. E. Massengill charged today that deaths attributed to the drug "elixir sulfanilamide," prepared in his laboratory, had been used by the United States Food and Drug Administration in an effort to "stampede Congress into giving them powers they had, heretofore, refused."

Dr. Massengill made his statement after the Administration, in a report to Congress, urged more stringent drug-control legislation. The report charged 73 persons had died as a result of taking the "elixir."

Dr. Massengill, head of the S. E. Massengill Co., which distributed the solution, declared his company had paid only two fines during its 31 years of operation, adding:

"When the amount of business we have done is taken into consideration, I believe this is the nearest perfect record of any pharmaceutical manufacturer in the United States."

Some one ought to protect the President's aides against some of the Capital's chiselers, sycophants and stuffed shirts who fall on their necks, dripping good fellowship, slobber all over them and try to appear chummy when the aides venture out in public after dark . . . They give the New Deal an old aroma . . .

* * * *

At best, they are merely a nauseating sight, trying to impress their chums with how arms-around-the-neck they are with Steve, Jimmy or Marvin . . . At worst, they try to sell this non-existent chumminess to boobs and lobbyists for fat checks.

* * * *

Against such brazen impositions, Marvin, Jimmy and Steve are helpless . . . In a democracy you gotta be a good guy, even when you'd like to poke the glad-hander in the snout . . . maybe the President's aides would like a bodyguard.

"—the charge of the chiselers"

It's a puzzle why the men at big celebrity rodeos in Washington appear (lumping 'em as a sex) so much more distinguished than the ladies—until it dawns on you that many of the women of Washington, worldly as they are, can't seem to resist the temptation to bedizen themselves with a bewildering, ghastly array of plumage, pelts, shiny knicknacks and odd pennants and streamers like the commodore's launch at an inland yacht regatta.

* * * *

This phenomenon, I verily believe, is the explanation of the rumor prevalent in polite European circles that the wild Indians still roam the plazas, drawing rooms and esplanades of Washington.

* * * *

Just for fun, I clocked a Senator who had the floor yesterday for two hours.

Of the 120 minutes, some 96 minutes were taken up by 11 other Senators who interrupted him and to whom he (Senator Pope) graciously yielded the floor.

"I didn't think well enough of the bill," he said, "to justify breaking the Sabbath."

* * * *

Other significant books visible on the White House shelves are "Speeches For All Occasions" (I wonder if Alf Landon and John Hamilton have these); "The American Way—Franklin Roosevelt in Action," by a Mr. Looker, and "The Enjoyment of Laughter."

The Republicans could use this last one too.

* * * *

* * * *

"—like the commodore's launch"

I took an English gentleman to lunch in the Senate restaurant after his first glimpse of the House and Senate in session . . .

He was greatly impressed by what he had seen ("Quite a frolic, what?") but kept asking where Huey Long was . . .

* * * *

Unable to tell him offhand, I asked how all this compared with the House of Commons . . . It seems that the English lawmakers work longer hours.

"They sit at 11 a. m. and 3 o'clock," he said, "and they're often in session until 11 at night."

"But your Senate," he added gallantly, "is much more like our House of Lords, which never convenes before 3 o'clock."

* * * *

He was amazed to hear that the Senate restaurant serves only noonday lunch . . .

"The dining hall at Parliament," he said, "serves breakfast, lunch, tea, dinner and supper, and you may have at any hour of the day anything from "sausages and mashed" to "grouse and champagne."

Drivers Face License Loss For 3 Crashes

Commissioners Adopt Safety Policy at Monthly Traffic Conference.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Every District driver involved in three or more accidents will face the loss of his driving permit by suspension or revocation, under a new highway safety policy adopted yesterday at the Commissioners' monthly traffic conference.

Since October 1, according to Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, records have been kept to show accident tendencies of individual motorists. These records as they are compiled in the future, he said, will be turned over to the Traffic Department for proper action.

Motorist Will Be Summoned.

When a motorist figures in at least three crashes, he will be called before the Board of Revocation and Restoration of Operators' Permits to "show cause" why his permit should not be suspended or revoked.

Edwards also told the meeting a "study file" of accident locations—showing the number and types of crashes at all Washington street intersections—has been established.

Governors Condemned.

The Board of Trade traffic committee attacked the plan of Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer to install speed governors on the automobiles of drivers convicted of repeated violations.

At a meeting in Harvey's Restaurant the committee voted unanimously against the governor proposal. A car limited to 30 miles an hour, as proposed, would prove a menace on rural highways where traffic moves faster, the committee held.

Assistant Traffic Director M. O. Eldridge explained the governor proposal was aimed only at the flagrant offender. He suggested the chronic crasher be forced to drive only within the city limits.

At the Commissioners' conference—attended by Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Inspector William E. Holmes, Police Traffic Supervisor Van Duzen, Eldridge and all precinct captains—it was agreed that a street ban was the only solution to Washington's congestion problem.

Would Extend Zones.

Commissioner Hazen suggested that if and when a daytime parking ban is adopted, it should be gradually established zone by zone to permit motorists to adapt themselves to new conditions.

Maj. Brown pointed out that a night parking ban would reduce the number of stolen cars and aid his men in protecting the public during hours of darkness.

Indicating that certain divisions of the police department are paying too little attention to traffic enforcement, Hazen urged all police units, regardless of their special functions, to regard traffic as an important problem.

He suggested also that policemen issue tickets to reputable motorists who are accused of minor infractions rather than escort them to the nearest precinct station.

This suggestion, however, was criticized by Capt. Lloyd Kelly, Eighth Precinct, who said a survey in his precinct last month showed that 60 per cent of all drivers to whom tickets were personally issued by officers failed to appear in court or to post collateral.

700 to Meet Here At Jewish Parley

More than 700 delegates from 60 American communities are expected here tomorrow for the convention of the American Jewish Congress at the Willard Hotel. The announced purpose of the congress is to create a united front against anti-Semitism.

At all-day sessions efforts will be made to devise a definite program in behalf of oppressed Jewish communities in Europe and to combat economic discrimination and other forms of anti-Semitism in the United States. Poland, Rumania and Danzig will receive special consideration, it was announced.

Among speakers will be Dr. Joachim Prinz, exiled from Germany because of his outspoken opposition to the Nazi regime. Other speakers will include Dr. Stephen S. Wise, president of the American Jewish Congress; Louis Lipsky, vice president; the Hon. M. Maldwin Fertig, chairman of the commission on organization; Rabbi Edward L. Israel, chairman of the Baltimore Council of the American Jewish Congress; Judge Nathan D. Perlman, chairman of the national executive committee; Carl Sherman, former attorney general for New York State and chairman of the commission on law; Rabbi J. X. Cohen, chairman of the commission on economic problems; Mr. Leo Lowitz, president of the Chicago Council; Dr. Joseph Tenenbaum, chairman of the joint boycott council.

Police Officer Is Dragged by Hit-Run Driver

Fire Chief's Auto Wrecked; 5 Injured, Day's Toll; Boy 92d Fatality.

Washington's ninety-second traffic fatality occured last night when 5-year-old Delano Bell, colored, died at Freedmen's Hospital from injuries received Wednesday when he was struck by an automobile in front of his home, 1839 Fourth street northwest.

Driver of the car, Ferrell Littlejohn, 19, 265 Hillside street northeast, has been charged with reckless driving. Last year's total of traffic deaths at this time was 81.

Meanwhile a policeman was injured and a fire chief's auto wrecked in a series of freak traffic crashes yesterday.

Acting Sergt. Bryan R. White, 41, of the Fifth Precinct, was painfully injured when his clothing became entangled in the bumper of a car which sped from the scene. White was hurled to the pavement and dragged face down for several yards.

At Gallinger Hospital he was treated for lacerations and abrasions of the face and an injured hand. He reported back on duty and finished his shift. He later was given a day's sick leave.

Gino J. Simi, Washington Times sports writer, was slightly injured when his automobile collided at Fifth and Crittenden streets with a battalion chief's car answering a fire alarm. Simi's car turned over twice, knocked over a street lamp and came to rest on the sidewalk. Simi received a cut on the head and a minor back injury, while Acting Battalion Chief J. L. Werheim and James White, of No. 6 Company, driver, were not hurt.

Louis Limburg, 7, of 705 Sixth street northwest, suffered a fractured skull and leg last night when he was struck by an automobile said to have been driven by John White, 18, of Clinton, Md., in the 400 block of Fourth street northwest. The child was taken to Emergency Hospital. Physicians said his condition was serious.

Mrs. Mary Rogers, 73, of 2608 Garfield street northwest, was in critical condition after she suffered a possible skull fracture and a broken nose when struck by an automobile driven by Charles W. Pearce, jr., 21, of 1804 Wyoming avenue, at Wisconsin avenue and Woodley road.

Internally injured when struck by an automobile in the 600 block of Third street southwest, John Booker, colored, 50, of 116 G street southwest, was in critical condition at Casualty Hospital. John H. Ports, 32, of 622 Tenth street southwest, driver of the car, was held pending outcome of the victim's injuries.

Maj. Brown Turns on Holiday Lights in Columbia Heights; Miss Nancy Lang Presides as Queen of Fete.

Christmas trees, colored lights and 25,000 persons last night flanked Fourteenth street from Spring road to Fairmont street as the Columbia Heights businessmen opened their ninth annual "Santa Claus Lane."

Polling a total of 48,913 votes, Miss Nancy Lang, of Sacred Heart Academy, presided as queen. Miss Gere D. Sale, of Central High School, with 27,909 votes, and Miss Irene King, of Sacred Heart Academy, with 16,824 votes, acted as maids of honor.

Other competitors in the "popularity contest" who shared parade honors with the queen in the parade were Miss Shirley Jane Peck, Mount Pleasant School for Secretaries; Miss Ellen Lauck, Central High; Miss Margaret Lowry, Roosevelt High; Miss Doris Pettit, Sacred Heart Aacademy, and Miss Zoe McCombs, Central High.

Other groups in the parade, which required almost an hour to pass, included the prize-winning Drum and Bugle Corps of the Costello Post; Lieut. Thomas Mason, jr., District commander, with an American Legion honor guard; the marching unit of the Columbia Heights Business Men's Association, led by Louis Gottlieb, and the following officers of the association: George A. Ford, president; William T. Gary, first vice president; Harry D. Gordon, second vice president; Mrs. Velma B. Merriam, third vice president, and Harry C. Phillips, secretary-treasurer.

Music was furnished by the Chestnut Farms Employes' Band, Sons of the American Legion Band, Elks Club Boys' Band and Holy Comforter Boys' Band.

The ceremony was broadcast over WMAL, with Gordon Hittenmark acting as master of ceremonies. The popularity contest was supervised by James Root, while Wayne C. Stone was in charge of arrangements for the parade.

Burroughs Group Approves of Rise In Transit Fares

The Burroughs Citizens' Association last night went on record in favor of the recent increase in Capital Transit fares, and especially of the universal transfers, long urged by the association. They favored sale of tokens three for 25 cents instead of six for 50 cents.

Officers of the association, however, announced the group planned to continue the campaign for better bus service on the Rhode Island avenue line, following its recent protest to District health officials against bus fumes.

The association planned to ask the District Director of Traffic for stoplights at Seventeenth and Rhode Island avenue northeast, and at the intersection of West Virginia, Montana and New York avenues.

Mrs. Boyle Given Schwartz Medal

Mrs. John Boyle, jr., director of the free lunch campaign for needy children in the District schools, last night was awarded the Charles Schwartz & Son's gold medal of honor for outstanding public service.

Presentation was made by Samuel Schwartz in exercises broadcast over radio station WRC. The announcer was Gordon Hittenmark.

Mrs. Boyle explained how first she observed the effects of proper diet on her own children, and how she conceived the idea of the free lunches when she observed the needy children who were undernourished.

"I don't consider the work I'm doing a charity. I consider what I am doing is an investment in good citizenship," said Mrs. Boyle.

Low-Cost Home Group Opened In Capital Area

One of the fondest dreams of Gen. George M. Sternberg, surgeon general of the Army from 1893 until 1902 and philanthropist, was realized yesterday when housewarming ceremonies were held in Sternberg Courts, new model apartments at O, P and Third streets and James Creek Parkway southwest.

It already is completed tenanted by Washingtonians who see the white dome of the Capitol in the distance and rapidly vanishing slums within a stone's throw of the ideal apartments where they live.

Sternberg Work Told.

Tribute to the life and work of Gen. Sternberg, first president and organizer of the Washington Sanitary Housing Co., was paid by Appleton P. Clark, jr., president of the firm.

"During this period he organized the Washington Sanitary Housing Co.," said Clark, "the basic idea of which was to demonstrate that it was possible to erect dwellings which could be rented for moderate sums and which would pay reasonable dividends."

Groups Co-operated.

Presiding over yesterday's affair was Dr. Leroy A. Halbert, chairman of the Clara D. Neligh Committee. Tribute to the project and to the life of Gen. Sternberg was paid by Canon Anson Phelps Stokes in a brief address.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who had accepted an invitation to inspect the project, was unable to come at the last minute because of the press of other engagements.

The housewarming was sponsored by the Neligh Committee and the Southwest Citizens' Association, of which Harry Wender is president. Co-operating groups were the American Association of University Women, Barney Neighborhood House, the Women's City Club and the Monday evening club.

Japan in Peace Miss Thomas' Address Topic

Japan in peace time, with its swirling life in the big cities, its festivals in the rural districts, and its marked contrasts between new and old, was presented to members of the National Geographic Society in an illustrated address by Pherbia Thomas at Constitution Hall last evening. Miss Thomas, a sister of Lowell Thomas, radio commentator, spent six months in the Island Empire.

Tokyo was shown to be a city of startling modernity, with swiftly moving electric lights spelling out news bulletins in Japanese characters, crowds of commuters stepping off electric trains and surging through station gates, and motion picture studios with all the Hollywood trimmings, including the director's "O K" at the end of a "take." By way of contrast with all this, Miss Thomas took her audience by means of pictures to rice planting festivals in muddy fields, to a famous "pearl farm," where young women dived for oysters in which seed pearls had been "planted" to grow into large gems, and to coastal waters where trained cormorants on leash caught fish and were hauled aboard boats and made to disgorge their catches.

Hazen Urges All to Help Seal Drive

Adequate Funds Lacking for More Vigorous Fight, He Warns.

Stating that the District lacks adequate appropriations for a more vigorous attack on tuberculosis, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday urged Washington citizens to aid in the fight by purchasing Christmas seals of the Tuberculosis Association.

The annual drive was begun Thanksgiving Day and will be continued until Christmas. In calling on the citizens to help Commissioner Hazen declared:

"When a public-spirited group of our citizens 34 years ago formed the Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis to aid public health officials in fighting the enemy, the tuberculosis death rate was 280 per 100,000 population. Last year the mortality from this cause was 107 per 100,000. The great gain thus indicated is due in large part to the efforts of this voluntary organization, working in co-operation with other health and welfare agencies."

Nevertheless, Washington's tuberculosis death rate is the second highest of all the larger cities, Commissioner Hazen said.

"Something must be done about it," he said. "I am glad to know that the Tuberculosis Association has undertaken to enlist the help of many organized groups of citizens for a more vigorous attack on tuberculosis during 1938. To carry on this fight effectively with various health and information services funds must be available.

"A way to provide these funds in which all can share is now again presented in the annual sale of the penny Christmas Seals of the Tuberculosis Association during the period from Thanksgiving to Christmas. I am therefore happy to join with my colleagues in urging all to aid in this necessary work for the protection of all by using as many of these little seals as they can afford."

Riding high over Washington in the Goodyear blimp, Mrs. Ernest W. Grant, managing director of the Tuberculosis Association of the District, yesterday made a plea in behalf of the seal campaign, using the facilities of the National Broadcasting Company.

Citizens to Seek More Members

The Anacostia Citizens' Association, in session at the Anacostia Methodist Church Hall last night, unanimously voted to join in the drive suggested by the Southeast Council of Citizens' Associations for new members during the first three months of 1938.

This action followed a round-table discussion in which the reported lack of civic spirit in many sections was deplored.

Navy Team Will Train Guns on Soldiers in Hopes of Victory and Chance to Ring Japanese Bel

This Morning

Work to Do, Thoughts While Stalling.

By Shirley Povich.

Stares at typewriter, wishes he were off. Ponders the possibilities of an Army-Navy piece, doubts if he can ring 50 more words out of the pregame situation. Soliloquizes that that's the trouble with big games. Every angle is exhausted a week before they're played. Looks at clock, wonders if he can catch the minute hand in the act of moving.

POVICH.

Runs fingers through hair and says dammit, the Redskins and Packers are always good for a column. Stares at typewriter and realizes he is slightly weary of the Redskins and Packers. Wishes he were off. Mustn't forget to bring home that cod liver oil for the offspring. Funny how the little guy actually likes it. With a start, looks at clock again. Would swear he actually saw the minute hand skip. Oh, well . . .

Tilts chair back, clasps and unclasps hands and says well, here goes. No time to waste. Navy to beat Army. No. Army to beat Navy. That's better, but why be a chump. If you're wrong, you get the works. If you're right, nobody remembers it anyway. Decides not to pick anybody to win. Decides he's written out about the Army-Navy game. Would have been a great day for golf. Wonders if that over-lapping grip will help on those two-iron shots. Would have had a 38 if that putt had dropped on the ninth the other day.

Decides he needs a drink of water, walks quarter mile to city-room fountain. Wonders if sports department will ever have drinking fountain for its very own. Realizes he is stalling. But that hangnail on the typing finger really hurts. How about that fellow who asked for a job last year? Didn't have any newspaper experience, but said he knew the touch system. Saw him the other day, managing a barbecue place. At least, he doesn't have to meet a deadline. Jeez, lookit the time.

Takes off coat, never did like to work with coat on. Realizes vest is getting tight around the middle, makes mental resolve to start workouts. Stares at typewriter, wonders if Mr. L. C. Smith, by chance, smokes Coronas. Decides that's a pretty punk pun and, anyway, must get to work. Sure'n'ell must. Scratches head, wishes he were off.

Hey, how about that Giants-Brooklyn game in New York Sunday? Smart guys those Giants when they decided to place-kick from the 5-yard line. It was a bad angle so they deliberately took an extra time out and were penalized 5 yards. Which reduced the angle and gave Tillie Manton a better shot

Rams Meet Violets, Eye Rose Bowl

By the United Press.

New York, Nov. 26.—When Fordham's powerful Rams tie into their Bronx rivals, the unpredictable New York University Violets, at Yankee Stadium tomorrow, the undefeated Rams figure to win by three or four touchdowns and keep their Rose Bowl aspirations intact. They have a sure-enough good team, deadly on defense and spirited on the attack, while the Violets have been playing in circles most of the season.

Fordham's memory of what occurred just a year ago, though, still is green. The Rams had their trunks half packed for a long trip to Pasadena when their neighbors smeared them, 7 to 6.

While it could happen again, the general feeling was that it wouldn't. In practically chasing St. Mary's into the Harlem River a week ago, the Rams appeared just to be reaching the zenith of their power, and they looked entirely too solid for any but a great team to upset.

The Violets, with a fine passer in Bernard Bloom, were expected to fill the air with footballs in a brave effort to score.

Barring a bid to the Rose Bowl, it will be the final game for four Fordham stars, Capt. John Druze, Al Babartsky, Ed Franco and Alex Wojciechowicz.

Baltimore, Nov. 26.—Murray Kanner, Baltimore heavyweight, won a technical knockout over Jim Swimmer, Washington, D. C., after 1 minute 12 seconds in the third round of a scheduled six-round fight here last night in the Fifth Regiment Armory.

Kanner, weighing 205, used his ten-pound advantage in flooring Swimmer in the second round before putting him down with a terrific clout to the chin.

Duke Blocks Pitt's Path to Rose Bowl

By the United Press.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 26.—Pittsburghs Panthers limbered up today at University of North Carolina training quarters in preparation for their nationally significant football game with Duke at Durham tomorrow.

On the outcome depended unbeaten Pitt's candidacy for the national football championship and possibly the chance to represent the East in the Rose Bowl.

In event of an upset victory for Duke's Blue Devils tomorrow, they were believed to have an outside chance to receive the Rose Bowl bid or an invitation to play in one of the other major "bowl" games.

As the two squads rested 12 miles apart both were in excellent physical condition. No significant injuries were reported by either squad, and Coach Jock Sutherland was expected to send in the backfield combination of John Michelosen, Marshall Goldberg, Harold Stebbins and Frank Patrick to start the game.

A light rain started falling in Durham, and the forecast was for more rain tomorrow. Regardless of weather conditions, however, upwards of 45,000 persons were expected to be in the stands by 2 p. m. for the kick-off. Attendance is expected to shatter the record of 42,880 for a Southern game, set in 1935 by the Duke-Carolina contest in which Duke upset Carolina's Rose Bowl hopes.

It was Duke's capacity for such upsets that added suspense to tomorrow's contest. Pitt has survived an exceptionally stiff schedule with a scoreless tie with Fordham as its only blemish. Duke tied Tennessee, 0-0, and lost to North Carolina.

Durham prepared boisterously for the game tonight. Hotels were crowded and their managements had removed destructables as mirrors, vases and curtains.

Georgia Tech Favored.

80,000 Fans To See Game

High Schools Will Battle for Charity Today.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—Young America takes the gridiron at Soldier Field tomorrow.

Two high school teams will play before 80,000, but what actually will draw this remarkably big crowd is one youngster whose exploits with a football this season have made him nationally famous.

He is William de Correvont, who is observing his nineteenth birthday anniversary today and who will celebrate his biggest moment tomorrow when he leads his suburban Austin High School teammates against St. Leo High for the Chicago prep championship. It will be the last game of his high school career.

A crowd of 80,000 for a high school game is a very remarkable tribute to a boy. The receipts will go to Mayor Edward F. Kelly's charity Christmas fund to feed the poor.

No other high school player in America, since the days of the late Walter Eckersall, and more recently since the famed Harold "Red" Grange galloped the gridirons for Illinois, has received the attention that has been bestowed upon young De Correvont. He is headline news at an age when most boys get a big thrill just seeing their names mentioned at the bottom of sport pages.

$206,700 Paid in Big Horse Auction

New York, Nov. 26 (AP).—The Old Glory auction sales, yearly metropolitan appearance of the hay and feed circuit magnates, were the biggest since 1931, but crafty Sep Palin stole the show.

While the sale was closing yesterday to the tune of a total of $206,700 for 226 yearling and mature trotters and pacers, Palin negotiated a $6,250 deal for Vesta Hanover, champion 2-year-old filly of the year, before she went up for auction, thereby beating rival bidders-to-be to the punch in the best David Harum manner.

Hudlin Is Sued.

Hot Springs, Ark., Nov. 26 (AP).—Robert Phillips, of Hot Springs, filed a $15,000 damage suit against Willis Hudlin, Cleveland baseball pitcher, in circuit court today.

Irish Meet A Crippled Trojan Team

Schindler Is Among Aces of S. California to Be Benched.

By the Associated Press.

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 26.—Notre Dame's Irish, battle-worn and weary, and the Trojans of Southern California, beset with injuries—but both still full of fight—will meet tomorrow in the twelfth act of the country's longest consecutive intersectional gridiron rivalry.

An injury will keep Ambrose Schindler, the Trojans' sharpest offensive weapon, out of action, and the game will be the last on Notre Dame's "suicide" schedule, but the prospect of another of their thrillers was enough to assure a crowd of around 50,000. A half dozen of their previous battles were spectacularly fought, and none failed to provide plenty of excitement.

Along with Schindler, whose knee injury has not yielded to treatment, two other regulars, Halfback Mickey Anderson and Tackle Phil Gaspar, are definitely out because of injuries. Mile Norton, right guard, probably will not start and may not play at all.

After a long skull practice at Chicago today, in which Assistant Coach Jeff Cravath, who scouted the Irish, made his report, Coach Howard Jones said Sophomore Grenville Lansdell would start at quarterback in place of Schindler, with Ray George at tackle for Gaspar, and Harry Smith in Norton's guard position. Anderson will be replaced by Boyd Morgan.

The Irish, fully aware of Trojan line strength, were prepared to take to the air with Jack McCarthy and Harry Stevenson throwing to Bunny McCormick, Ennio ABoitr, Len Skoglund and Earle Brown. The Trojan defense against aerials has appeared weak at times, and Notre Dame was primed to make the most of any such shortcoming.

The Irish-Trojan series will run at least four years longer, Coach Elmer Layden, of Notre Dame, announced today, with 1938 and 1939 meetings already scheduled. Layden said the schools have agreed to December 7 at Los Angeles, and November 22 at South Bend, for 1940 and 1941, respectively.

102,000 Will Watch Army-Navy Resume Gridiron Feud Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Philadelphia, Nov. 26.—Glances were directed skyward tonight for the tip-off on the morrow's proceedings at Philadelphia's huge municipal stadium, where it will be Army vs. Navy for the thirty-eighth year.

Tonight's incoming thousands who will be part of the 102,000 noncombatants in the stands learned that the weather man holds, in a large measure, the fate of both the Army and Navy elevens.

Indications of rain forced the football experts to hold in abeyance the selection of either Army or Navy as the favorite to win. Come rain, as promised, Navy will be elevated from the under-dog role to favoritism. On a dry field, it will be Army at odds ranging from 8 to 5 to 2 to 1.

Treacherous underfooting would seriously threaten the efficiency of the tricky running game, with a premium on speed, and the passes with which Army is equipped. Navy, content to rely on power and with a squad that will outweigh Army's, would be a huge beneficiary if the gridiron is wet.

Enthusiasm Is High.

But the rain which threatens to dampen Army's chances of winning has not dampened the pre-game enthusiasm of this year's Army-Navy crowd which already has filled Philadelphia's hotels. But those fans who neglected to buy their tickets, early, through the regular channels, are now paying dearly.

At licensed ticket offices and on street corners where scalpers operate surreptitiously, seats for the game are selling as high as $30 each, with, seemingly, a buyer for every available ticket.

Either team probably would settle greedily for an amount of yardage tomorrow that would be equal to the combined length of the gold braid decorating the uniforms of the big-shots on the sidelines. High officials of both the Army and Navy will be a dime a dozen in the stadium boxes tomorrow.

High Officials On Hand.

Rear Admiral W. T. Cluverius, commandant of the Fourth Naval District, which embraces Philadelphia, will be among a group of ranking Navy officials, and Congressmen will be the guests of the Navy Athletic Association. Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson will head the service group and Senators James F. Byrnes and David I. Walsh will head the Congressional contingent.

The kick-off, at 1:30 o'clock, will be preceded by the usual colorful pre-game parades of the Army and Navy regiments of cadets beginning at 12:15. Along with the weather man's prediction of rain was the forecast that the temperature would ze a comparatively mild 52 degrees.

Fear Pass Attack.

Navy's chief concern as the battle neared was a defense for the Army passing combination of Woody Wilson and "Huey" Long, the strange, politically-named pair who all season have been powerful scoring weapons for the West Pointers.

Army's running attack will be operated by Wilson, Long, Ryan and Craig, a veteran quartet who have been clicking with an extreme streakiness all season. For the first time in several years Army lacks a super-back of the Monk Meyer-Harry Wilson type.

Navy's line, which will average 194 pounds in front of a backfield that averages 180, is expected to clear the way for Coach Hardwick's scoring machine. All season, the Navy line has been funtioning superbly and tomorrow Quarter Back Art Franks is expected to send a majority of the Middies' plays directly at the strong side of the Army wall.

Ingram Is Ailing.

Encouraging to Navy adherents in recent days is the apparent intention of Coach Hardwick to send "Navy Bill" Ingram into the lineup at the first indication that Navy has a scoring chance. Ingram, hero of last year's 7-0 triumph of the Middies, has been ailing all season with a leg injury, but was saved from the Princeton game last week with tomorrow's objective in view.

Ingram, who will be the ranking player on the field when he is in action, is the spearhead of both the Navy running and passing game, and it has been a defense for Ingram's individual maraudings which has occupied Army coaches for several days.

Bob Antrim and Arthur Frank, the workhorses in the Navy backfield, will be in the starting line-up along with Lem Cooke and Emmett Wood. In recent weeks, Cooke has become a new power on the Navy team and Philadelpia fans who saw Wood gallop against Penn earlier in the season here stamp him as the outstanding threat in any Navy backfield that lacks Ingram.

Celebrate at Annapolis.

The Navy's squad of 37 players, with its managers, coaching staff, goat mascot and goatkeepers, will entrain from Annapolis at 8 a. m. tomorrow. At Annapolis today the midshipman regiments held a final uproarious pregame celebration, urging the team to "Beat Army," and marching to the words of "Beat West Point." Annapolis all week has been placarded with "Sink Army" signs.

Here in Philadelphia the game has transformed the city into a gay carnival ground for football folks. Banners and colors drape the mid-city. Venders on every corner hawk toy middies and soldiers. Visiting girls are already wearing chrysanthemums. The hotels are worrying where to put the folks. Dozens of special trains from New York, Washington and other Eastern points are racing gameward. Twenty-five thousand fans from New York are expected.

Larry Kelley Picks Navy to Sink Army and Pitt to Beat Duke

By Larry Kelley.

It grieves me to report that there have been no buyers for that crystal ball. This, despite the fact that they used to sell the Brooklyn Bridge to suckers. My faith in human nature is tottering.

Anyhow, this is my last chance to pull a few winners out of the hat. But before getting down to business, I should like to say a few words in praise of the University of Missouri. Talk about the Notre Dame teams that used to be called Ramblers, why they never get outside the village limits!

Last Saturday, the Show Me boys traveled to St. Louis to play Washington University there. Yesterday they played Kansas at Lawrence, Kans., and tomorrow they take on U. C. L. A. at Los Angeles. That, pals, is moving. The slogan out there must be: "Play football at Missouri and see the world!"

* * * *

So now for our last jaunt around the country. I have acquired a new limb to go out on, my limb having fallen off the tree last week.

Before a packed stadium that was sold out months ago, it's battalions against boats in Philadelphia, where Army and Navy swing into action. More than 100,000 will be present to see a couple of teams, either of which has anything to write home about—unless it's losing ball games!

Rated highly before the season opened, Navy lost a close one to Notre Dame and then dropped two more to Princeton and Penn. The Army record looks better on paper, but the Cadets have looked worse against the same teams Navy has played.

But whenever Army and Navy come together on a football field, all past records can be thrown into the nearest ash can—the boys really rise to the heights and play for keeps against each other. Navy has the edge in man-power this year and for that reason I pick them by a shade—a very thin shade.

* * * *

Here we are down South again and what a team we're down there with. Sure, it's Pitt, led by the finest halfback combination in the world. It will be Pitt's devastating power against Duke's (Blue) devilish deception and air attack. I doubt that the Devils, even with such stylish backs as Hackney and Tipton to show the way, will move through that Panther line. But it's hot down there. Hot as blazes at times. It is possible that if Pitt holds off until the fourth quarter, the heat may hold them more than Duke.

But I've been on that Pitt bandwagon all year and see no reason to tumble off at this late date. I like those Panthers in their last game of the year—I said "last" game because I think California knows when it's well off!

* * * *

Back to New York for a couple easy ones. Yes, that's what I said, easy. Miracles do happen but not twice in the same place. Fordham was training for the Rose Bowl last November when N. Y. U. stopped the train. But it won't happen again. My little crystal ball, just back from the cleaners (along with me), tells me so.

Columbia and Stanford. Let's go back into history for a minute. The scene: the Rose Bowl. The time: January 1, 1935. The characters: Stanford, leading man. Pity poor Columbia, comic relief. The result: Columbia, 7; Stanford, 0.

* * * *

And again. This time the scene shifts to New York and Furey replaces Barabas in the Columbia backfield. Late arrivals missed it all, for the kickoff went to Furey and Furey went over the Stanford goal.

But the program is gonna be different tomorrow. Tiny Thornhill has re-written the script and Stanford, second team in the Coast Conference, will take the field with revenge in mind. I don't see how the Little Lions can hope to hold 'em.

One more game in the East. Holy Cross has two ties and seven victories, most of the work having been done by Bill Osmanski. He's pretty well battered now and that will make it tough for the Crusaders. Gloomy Gil Dobie's outfit took it on the chin for the first time in ancient history from Boston U. last week. That should make them plenty mad—mad enough, I think to dispell a bit of Dobie's perpetual gloom.

And that's that. This is the chance for the crystal ball. By Saturday night I'll probably be wishing that some broken-down medium had taken it for a song. Instead of my singing the blues again.

West Pointers Who Will Point for Navy Team and Traditional Stage Coach Victory Ride

In This Corner

Army, Pitt, Fordham, Notre Dame Picked.

By Jack Cuddy.

New York, Nov. 26.—The last roundup:

Army vs. Navy—More than 102,200 fans—the largest crowd of the season—will see the West Point Cadets and Annapolis Middies stage their annual etxravaganza at Philadelphia tomorrow on football's last big Saturday. The future Generals are 2-1 favorites to down the sailors in their thirty-eighth meeting because of Navy's in-and-out performances this year. But if it rains—watch out! The Gobs have the heavier team.

* * * *

Pittsburgh vs. Duke—Jock Sutherland's unbeaten Panthers, outstanding candidates for the national title and possible invitees to the Rose Bowl, risk their laurels against Duke's formidable Blue Devils at Durham, N. C. The Panthers are favored because they've weathered a stiff intersectional and have only a scoreless tie with Fordham against their record. Duke was tied by Tennessee and beaten by North Carolina.

* * * *

Fordham vs. New York.—Sleepy Jim Crowley's unbeaten Rams slam into N. Y. U.'s Violet eleven at Yankee Stadium. The Rams are trying to plow through their last barrier to a possible trek to the Rose Bowl dreams. Fordham is favored because of its defensive strength and because only the Pittsburgh deadlock marred its stiff intersectional program. The Violets lost to North Carolina, Lafayette and Georgetown.

* * * *

Southern California vs. Notre Dame—Howard Jones' Trojans invade the Irish for a grand intersectional brawl at South Bend, Ind. Notre Dame is favored because of its late-season improvement, after being tied by Illinois and beaten by Carnegie Tech and Pittsburgh. Southern California has a better team than its record indicates. The Trojans lost to Washington, California and Stanford and was tied by Washington State and Oregon State, but they were strong enough to beat Ohio State.

* * * *

Stanford vs. Columbia — Tiny Thornhill's Indians, who gave mighty California a thundering battle last week, tackle the Columbia Lions at Baker Field. It is their third meeting, and for the third time Stanford is favored. Columbia won both previous meetings by the same 7-0 score, in the Rose Bowl in 1934 and last year at the Polo Grounds. The Lions have had a poor season, losing to Army, Brown, Cornell, Navy and Dartmouth and suffering a tie with Syracuse. Meanwhile Stanford lost to Santa Clara, Oregon and California and was deadlocked by Oregon State. But Columbia's coach, Lou Little, is full of tricks.

* * * *

These games feature the season's finale, and the Pittsburgh-Duke and Fordham-N. Y. U. encounters are of particular interest because of the national and Rose Bowl angles. From this Eastern observation station it seems that Pitt, Fordham or Alabama are the three outstanding Bowl candidates. Alabama remained robustly in the running by beating Vanderbilt, 9-7 Thursday, thereby finishing the season with a perfect record.

Packers May Reveal Trick Tactics Here

Wide-Open Football Will Be Seen as Both Teams Prepare Razzle-Dazzle Type; Both Clubs Practice Behind Barred Gates.

Wide-open football from the first whistle is in prospect as the Redskins and Green Bay Packers taper off for their important battle tomorrow at Griffith Stadium.

Head Coaches Ray Flaherty and Curly Lambeau are prepared to unfurl every play in their team's repertoire if necessary, they declared last night in radio interviews.

Neither club will have anything to hide or to keep from prying scouts. The Packers will be playing their last scheduled league game and the Redskins cannot afford to be beaten if they are to remain in the Eastern race.

Trick stuff has been a regular feature of the Packers' style of play and the Redskins, given a dry field for the first time in three weeks, will be able to open up with the hocus-pocus that marked their play earlier in the season.

Yesterday, both teams practiced behind closed gates at Griffith Stadium, lending further evidence that tomorrow they are prepared to attempt other than routine plays.

Coach Flaherty hung out storm warnings to his Redskikns, pointing out that the Packers were equipped to pass on virtually every play, whether or not the famed Arnie Herber was in the passing position. Flaherty reminded the team that Bob Monnett, Herber's teammate, actually has a better passing average than Herber, and that Joe Lawes also is a proficient chucker.

Flaherty is debating the advisability of starting Sammy Baugh in the Redskins' backfield. Baugh has been withheld from the starting lineup in previous games with Flaherty waiting to see the Redskins' running attack function. But, with the Redskins prepared to shoot the works, Baugh may answer the opening whistle.

A Redskin backfield comprised of Baugh, Cliff Battles, Riley Smith and Don Irwin may take the field at the outset. Dixie Howell, foremost bench warmer of the Washington club, has steadily regained the form that made him an All-American at Alabama, and Flaherty may inject him into the lineup at some point during the game.

Half of the stadium has already been sold out for the game, with few reserved seats remaining. Fourteen thousand general admission seats are still on sale at the Redskin and Griffith Stadium offices.

Three bands will entertain during the between-the-halves intermission. The Redskins own Swing Band; the Fort Stevens American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps and the Chestnut Farms Band will stage parades. The Chesapeake & Potomac Glee Club, directed by Robert Davidson, is also programmed between the halves.

Miami Invites Austin.

Miami, Fla., Nov. 26 (AP).—The Austin High School football team of Chicago, with its great halfback, Bill Decorrevont, has been invited to play Miami High School in the annual intersectional Christmas Day game here, it was announced today.

Post Offers Star Eleven

Players' All-High Team to Appear Tomorrow.

The first annual Washington Post Players' All-High team, the product of a poll conducted among all the members of the six competing elevens in the interhigh football series, will be published in every edition tomorrow.

Accompanying the selections for a first and second eleven will be a picture of the first eleven with a summary explaining why each boy was chosen. Although the mythical star-studded aggregation will doubtless occasion some surprise and possibly some controversy, The Post believes it truly is a representative All-High team.

In years past it has been the custom for different newspaper reporters and other persons to choose All-High teams. So many arguments, many of them justifiable, arose that none ever was officially recognized. However, now that the players themselves, the ones who above everybody else certainly should know the best performers, have picked a team, it should prove highly interesting if not generally rated as official.

Interviewed informally and individually last night, members of the first eleven were virtually unanimous in agreement with the selections. Naturally enough there was a slight difference of opinion on several choices but this coincided with the complete voting.

These eleven players, as the coaches and a large majority of all the players have already done, labeled the innovation a great idea and said they thought it should produce the best possible All-High team.

Annapalis, Md., Nov. 26.—Coach Valentine (Dutch) Lentz put the St. John's football team through a light pregame workout today in final training for the fifty-fifth game with the Johns Hopkins University tomorrow in Baltimore.

The squad worked on the defensive, ran passes, put in a period of signal drill, practiced kick-offs, and the backs ran back punts.

The St. John's team will be at full strength for the first time since the Maryland game. Johnny Lambros, triple-threat back, recovered from injuries and has been showing speed in practice.

The team came out of the Army game without injuries and were given a rest yesterday. They reported back this morning and will leave before noon tomorrow for Homeland Field.

Local Featherweight Title Asked by Manuel

Local Crown Claimed by Removed Florida Fighter, While Joe Temes, Local Boy, Also Begins Chase of Lou Gevinson; Fight Card Completed.

By Bob Garrison.

Washington's featherweight title situation took two turns toward turmoil yesterday as two ambitious battlers served notice on Lou Gevinson, popularly recognized ruler of the heap.

Seeking official recognition from the District Boxing Commission, Baby Manuel, transplanted Tampa, Fla., aspirant, yesterday filed a letter asking that he be recognized as the champion of the District of Columbia. At the same time it was announced that Joe Temes, local boy who has been doing fairly well of late in out-of-town rings, has been signed to fight here next week, after an absence of nearly a year, and is gunning for Lou.

Pointing out that he is now a resident of the District and boxes normally at the class limit of 126 pounds, Manuel, who last week defeated Ray Ingram, formerly eighth ranking national featherweight, bluntly requested that he be recognized as champion. His fight last week represented his first bout in Washington in nearly six months. He has fought in his career such battlers as Cowboy Howard Scott, over whom he holds a victory; Henry Armstrong, present world champion, and Petey Sarron, erstwhile ruler, he pointed out.

He used these bouts as evidence of his ability and further stated that he stands ready to meet any legitimate featherweight named by the commission.

Temes, who last year lost a much-booed decision to Lou Gevinson, returns to the local ring wars next Monday night after having run up three straight victories in Philadelphia, the center of his activity during the past few months. He has been signed by Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn to oppose Johnny DeCarlo, of Baltimore, in a 6-round bout on Joe Turner's weekly fight card at his W street arena.

Manuel will meet his second local opponent, Tony Dupre, in anticipation of a match with Lefty Lou Gevinson. Manuel and Dupre reached the final round of an elimination that was begun to obtain an opponent for Gevinson with victories last week. They are listed for 8 rounds.

Manuel defeated Ray Ingram in an 8-round decision while Dupre, a new-comer from New Hampshire, defeated another outsider Armando Sicillia over the same distance.

Meanwhile Ahearn completed the card for Monday night. As it now stacks up, there will be two 8-round wind-up bouts and two 6-round semi-windups, augmented by a 4-round opening event.

George Abrams, undefeated local favorite will meet Johnny Barrie, Pittsfield, Mass., Golden Gloves champion, in the other 8-rounder and Steve Mamakos, Golden Greek, will meet Young Chaney, Baltimore welterweight, in another 6-round affair. These two bouts forecast an inevitable meeting between Abrams and Mamakos, local favorites. Both were Golden Gloves champions and are undefeated in the pro ranks.

Joe Sofis, Philadelphia lightheavy weight, will meet Maynard Daniels, Marine, who, recently entered the money ranks, in the 4-round opening event.

Workman Is Proud Poppa of Baby Boy

Raymond (Sonny) Workman, Washington jockey, became the proud father of a baby boy yesterday. This is the third child born to the Workmans, who make their home in Washington, and their first boy. The star rider announced that the new boy would not become a jockey.

Workman is under contract to Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt who signed him after he had ridden for C. V. Whitney for a decade. He said the baby would be christened "Raymond Richard, jr."

Workman, who learned to ride at the Benning Track, leaves for California early next month. His family will remain in the East. Mrs. Workman and the boy are at Providence Hospital.

Paper Says 'Bama Got Bid to Bowl

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 26 (U.P.). The Birmingham Post said today the University of Alabama football team had been invited to play in the New Orleans Sugar Bowl game New Year's Day and was withholding its reply pending a possible invitation to play in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena, Calif.

The Sugar Bowl bid was extended to Coach Frank Thomas, of the Crimson Tide, after his team had defeated Vanderbilt at Nashville, Tenn., yesterday, to finish the season undefeated and untied, according to John Putnam, sports editor of the Post.

Drake Wins Over Miami

Bulldogs Score in Last Period; Triumph 7-0.

By the United Press.

Miami, Fla., Nov. 26. — A last-period touchdown jaunt by Bud Suter, a 155-pound pony back, gave Drake a hard-fought 7-to-0 triumph tonight over Miami University.

Suter's scoring dash, which was for 11 yards, climaxed a 55-yard drive and came early in the fourth period after Miami had played the favored Bulldog eleven to a standstill for three quarters.

Drake took the ball on Miami's 45-yard line and in two plays Suter and Bob Underwood cracked the Hurricane line for 34 yards. Suter then slipped between tackle and guard to go over from the 11 for the only score of the game. Phil Manders kicked the extra point.

Miami never threatened seriously, but stood off two strong marches by the Drake huskies in the first and third periods. Drake was inside Miami's 10-yard stripe both times, but could not penetrate the Hurricane's stubborn defenses.

The game was played in a drizzle and was witnessed by 9,000 spectators.

Score by periods:

Drake	0	0	0	7	—7

Touchdown—Underwood. Point after touchdown—Manders.

Austin, Tex., (AP).—Short punt, single wingback stiff-arm and criss-cross now are familiar terms to University of Texas co-eds.

Mann Beats Bob Pastor In 10 Rounds

New Haven Battler Gets Unanimous Decision in Garden Bout.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 26.—Young Bob Pastor's championship aspirations went right out the window tonight when Nathan Mann, rugged New Haven heavyweight, gave him a fancy trimming before 6,600 exulting customers at Madison Square Garden. Mann weighed 185¾; Pastor, 183.

The ten-round decision was unanimous. There was slight doubt of the result after the middle of the first round, when Mann dropped Pastor to one knee with a chopping right. There were no more knockdowns and little visible damage outside of a cut that appeared over the winner's right eye in the seventh round.

The crowd, remembering too well the fight in which Pastor dodged Champion Joe Louis for 10 rounds last winter, took much joy in the defeat of the former New York University footballer.

Even Jimmie Johnston, Pastor's voluble pilot, had no argument with the decision. The Associated Press score sheet credited Mann with six rounds, two of which were given him outright by Referee Arthur Donovan because of Pastor's low blows. Pastor took only one round, the second.

Mann was at no time in difficulty. Pastor, on the other hand, looked like he might fold a time or two after Mann had planted thunderous belts in his stomach. Once he started to double up and claim foul, but the referee rudely told him to get on with his fighting.

The defeat knocked Pastor loose from the world's No. 4 ranking which he had held and plunked Mann right into the middle of the heavyweight picture. The winner had been promised a battle with Tommy Farr in the Garden late next month.

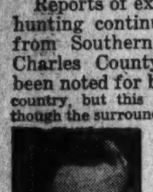
Post Notes on HUNTING

By Bill Ackerman.
The Post's All Outdoors Editor.

Reports of exceptional quail hunting continue to come in from Southern Maryland. Charles County always has been noted for being bobwhite country, but this year it looks as though the surrounding counties also have their full quotas of this delectable upland bird.



ACKERMAN.

Capt. Ed Bowen, of Solomons, spends an hour or two in the woods almost daily, and it is seldom that he doesn't have his limit. That is, with the exception of the past few days that he has been here in Washington getting nautical decorations for the opening on Saturday evening of his new "Harbor" room.

He tells us a funny one about an embryo hunter, to whom he loaned his dog, and set the pair in a nearby section that has fairly been overrun with birds.

Returning in the late afternoon, he swore by all that's holy that he had flushed 14 coveys, but had failed to bring down a single bird.

That's a pretty good story to show how swell the shooting is down your way, Ed, but don't you suppose if that friend of yours was so green with his gun, that he might have been following one covey all day, that after the first few shots with no loss of tail feathers, they decided to give him the run-around for "sport."

Jim Wallen, also of Solomons, where he is connected with the shipyard of M. M. Davis, is all adither with the fine shooting, too, from the hurried call he gave us the other day to see if we knew of a good dog that he could buy. He must have gotten what he wanted, for we haven't heard from him since.

With the opening of wildfowl hunting tomorrow will come the first of the stories and arguments as to the speed of duck in flight. They come just as sure as there is an open season, and in them the estimates of duck hunters run as high as 150 miles per hour, when more than likely it is somewhere between 40 and 70 miles an hour.

May Thacker Cook, of the Biological Survey, who has compiled a summary on the flight speed of birds, has many interesting notes. She says mallards fly from 50 to 60, pintails and canvasbacks 65 to 72, but that Canadian geese rarely attain a speed of 60, and this for only a short period of time.

Build, body and feather conditions, as well as atmospheric conditions, are all causes for variation, so no really hard and fast rules can be laid down as to bird speeds.

Duck hawks can travel about three times as fast as most ducks and are the fastest flying birds reported. One of these hawks diving on its victim flew 165 to 180 miles an hour when timed with a stop watch. Diving at a flock of ducks at a velocity of nearly 175 miles an hour, an aviator reports that a hawk, presumably a duck hawk, passed him as though the plane were standing still and struck one of the ducks.

Rapid wingbeats or erratic flight sometimes give a false impression of great speed, as with the ruby-throated humming bird, whose velocity in easy flight is from 45 to 55 miles an hour.

Birds in migration are popularly supposed to fly at great altitudes, but aviators report that it is exceptional to see any more than 5,000 feet above the earth, and few are seen above 3,000 feet. At great altitudes the lessened buoyancy of the air probably makes the flight of birds more difficult, just as it does for airplanes. There are records of birds at great altitudes, but it is mostly in a mountainous country where they are flying at comparatively short distances above the land.

The one controllable cause for not sending more wildfowl back to the Northern nesting areas each spring is their hunting.

For the past two years the drastic regulations on shooting them has reduced the kill far below that of any previous years, and it is readily accepted that the increase this year is far above what this year's kill could be, but in spite of this, just as one swallow doesn't make a summer, neither do a few thousands of ducks over the normal kill begin to supply the stock for the depopulated nesting grounds. It will be necessary to hold these restrictions for at least another year or two if we ever hope to send the needed numbers back.

The Runner Gets Place By a Length

Winner Pays but $6.80; Dark Beau Is Third; 8,000 Present.

By Walter Haight.
Staff Correspondent

Bowie, Md., Nov. 26.—Biscayne Blue, a son of St. James, who wins often enough to earn his oats in the Bomar Stable, picked today to run one of his good races and drove to a neck victory in the Norfolk Purse, the feature event. The Runner was second, defeating Dark Beau by a length for the place money. Somewhere in the crowd of 8,000 were persons who either knew or anticipated a good race. Biscayne Blue paid only a $6.80 mutuel.

Jockey L. Turner, under conder contract to the Bomar Stables, gave the winner a rousing ride. When Biscayne Blue broke on top, Turner steadied him along, saving the young gelding for more important running later. Sun Capture and The Runner fought it out for the doubtful honor of setting the pace. With Sun Capture's faltering, Dark Beau moved up and took the lead, followed by The Runner.

Plenty of Wagering.

The weather was perfect for racing and, despite yesterday's record gathering and wagering, customers were plentiful and wagering was at a merry clip.

The day brought a $51.20 daily double mutuel on the combination of Ebony Boy and Kenty.

The Cosgrave Stable's Ebony Boy turned in an upset victory in the first race, paying a $23 mutuel after leading 11 other juveniles to the wire. Briar Plume, well played, was virtually left at the post, and, despite the handicap, came with a closing rush that was only a half length short of a dead heat. Doggerel was third. Ebony Boy was rated by Jockey H. Mora until the final quarter. He worked hard from that point to the finish line, for Briar Plume was flying at him.

Room Service, a daughter of The Porter, came from behind to take the second race, and again longshot prices were displayed. The filly was excellently handled by Jockey Joe O'Malley and defeated, among others, Tilaana and Fleur du Mal. The winner brought a $20.70 payoff.

Kenty, owned by E. R. Pike and teamed with Teddy's Star in the betting, won the third race with speed to spare. The big son of Teddy, an also, ran here yesterday, was in his class today, and, with Jockey Jackie Westrope guiding, won by a length and a half. Idle Way was second and Prince Turley was third in the field of ten. Westrope kept Kenty on the outside and out of trouble from the start. Kenty produced a $9.40 mutuel.

Ritz Brothers Scores.

A 3-year-old gelding named Ritz Brothers scored a driving victory in the fourth race under good handling by Apprentice Jockey H. Keppler. The gelding came around the front runners approaching the stretch, went to the front and had enough left to stave off the closing bid of Ranicilla. Beaunada, the favorite, was third in the field of a dozen. The winner paid $11.30.

Kindacorn, an ancient mare, came from far back to show much hustle and bustle in the stretch with the result that she took a half-length decision from Passing Eve in the sixth race. Zinnia was a close third. Running in the colors of Mrs. M. J. O'Brien and ridden by Apprentice Jockey J. Jaekle, Kindacorn brought her backers a $13.80 mutuel.

Far Cry defeated Golden Vein by a length and a half with Flying Orphan a distant third in the seventh race. The winner paid $9 and brought Jaekle his second straight winner.

Allegany High Wins.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 26.—Allegany High School's football team won the city championship, permanent possession of The Times trophy and one leg on the new Chamber of Commerce cup, by defeating Fort Hill High yesterday afternoon on the Fort Hill Stadium gridiron, 6-2.

at the goal posts. He made it, too, with only 90 seconds to play and tied the score. Yeah, but that's water over the dam. What to write?

Hi, Sid. Funny guy that Olson. Nuts about automobile racing. Well, there are people who like badminton and quoits. But there's work to be done. How about a piece called "Thoughts While Stalling." Decides it wouldn't do. How about a baseball piece. Wonders why he didn't think of that before. Baseball pieces are always easy, the path of least resistance. The Nats wil make some trades at Chicago. Decides to speculate. Decides not to do a baseball column. Wishes he were off.

Wonders if he needs another drink of water, decides it isn't worth the long walk. Looks at clock, wonders if there's anything else so pitiless, so relentless. Realizes again that he's stalling, and guesses that ennui is the word for it. Says snap out of it, Povich, and poises hands above keyboard. Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their party. Wonders if he can write that without looking. Now isthe ti,e for all goof mrn . . . decides he can't.

About Cigarettes.

Decides to quit trifling and buckle down. Tilts chair, pulls at nose and lights cigarette. Drops cigarette, reaches for it, bumps head on desk and rubs head. Begins to believe everything happens to him. Wonders if he hadn't better risk a few bobs on the Redskins at even money with a 7-point concession. Decides it's a good bet. Decides it is not a good bet. Looks at clock. Sighs.

Kicks self for not thinking about a Rose Bowl piece hours ago. Can always speculate about who will go to the Rose Bowl. Pitt is the best team, Alabama the best attraction and Fordham the East's favorite. Decides too much has already been written about the Rose Bowl, wishes he were off. Wonders why some cigarettes burn well, others lousy. And from the same pack.

Fails to find comfortable position in chair, decides he's just a faultfinder. Realizes there is no more time to waste and must get to work with no more delay. Discovers he has blown a smoke ring and wonders if he can do it again. He can't. But now, no more stalling. Stares at typewriter, wishes he were off.

Selections at Bowie.

Dear Al:

Howard Bruce has retired his capable sprinter, Mattapony, and will send her to his farm, where she will be bred to a Maryland stallion next spring. A. H. Utterback claimed Khay yesterday for $1,500 and shipped the plater to Charles Town along with Nadair, Secret Vote and Jungo. More than 400 horses are scheduled to leave here for the West Virginia track Tuesday. Jockey Johnny Gilbert wired from California that his wife, former Jockey Don Meade's sister, presented him with a 7-pound baby girl yesterday. Mutuel Manager Mort Mahoney said today that the track was averaging $303,000 daily play. Bobby Curran, Silver Spring, Md., trainer, ships ten of the Araho Stable horses to Florida nexe week. As far as big purses are concerned, Bowie gets away with murder this week-end. In contrast to the other Maryland tracks which offer big Saturday stakes, Bowie's top event is the $1,500 added W. P. Burch Memorial. Buddy Ensor arrived from Rockingham and the one-time great rider says he will ask for a license to ply his trade in Florida this winter. BILL.

Wheat Rallies With Gains in Export Sales

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—Shooting upward 3⅝ cents a bushel from early bottom levels today, the Chicago wheat market not alone overcame losses but scored substantial net gains.

Aiding wheat values to rally with vigor from downturns attributed to bearish Southern Hemisphere crop advices was late announcement of North American wheat export business totaling upward of 1,100,000 bushels, including about 500,000 bushels of United States hard winter wheat. Besides, the wheat market here was stimulated by encouraging action of securities at New York.

Jobs Reach Recovery Peak In September

Increases in Retail Trade Offset Curtailment in Other Lines.

New York, Nov. 26.—Notwithstanding the recession in industrial activity, the numbers of persons employed in the United States rose from 42,288,000 in August to a new recovery high of 42,484,000 in September, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. While factories, railroads and the building industry reported a curtailment of employment, decreases in these lines were more than offset by increases in employment on the farms, in wholesale and retail trade establishments and in coal mines.

The gain in employment from August to September was more than sufficient to offset the increase in the supply of workers as the result of the growth of population. Consequently, the number of unemployed persons declined from 9,181,000 in August to 9,015,000 in September, a new low for the recovery movement.

Although the downward trend of unemployment may be halted, no great increase in the number of persons unemployed is likely to occur before the end of the year as the result of the prospective continuation of the recession in industrial activity. The seasonal increase in retail trade employment will be an offsetting factor. In January, however, after the holiday season is over, unemployment is likely to show a substantial increase.

Frisco Road Files Reorganization Plan

St. Louis, Nov. 26 (AP).—A plan of reorganization for the St. Louis-San Francisco (Frisco) Railroad, which would scale down fixed interest charges from nearly $13,000,000 a year to $3,956,000 was filed by the board of directors today in United States District Judge George H. Moore's court.

In exchange for existing bonds, stocks and bank loans which make up the railroad's capitalization of $405,598,400, the reorganization contemplated new issues of stocks and bonds which, at par or stated values, would reduce obligations to $388,914,200. Of this debt, only $102,416,200 would require fixed interest payments. Interest and dividends on the remainder would be contingent on earnings.

Patino Mines Votes To Reduce Capital

New York, Nov. 26 (AP).—Stockholders of Patino Mines & Enterprises Consolidated, Inc., tin producer, with operations in South America, voted today to reduce the company's capitalization $16,570,180, to $13,803,160 through reduction in stated value of capital stock from $20 to $10 a share. They also authorized an increase in capital stock from 1,380,316 shares to 2,500,000 shares at the discretion of directors.

Alexander B. Royce, vice president, told stockholders a year-end dividend would probably be recommended by directors.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Advance in More Active Trade; Government Bonds Gain; Wheat Up.

New York, Nov. 26.—Better prices in most securities markets reflected the better feeling engendered by the holiday. Stocks moved up 1 to 4 points in more active trading. Sales volume went beyond a million shares. United States were firmer and the dollar advanced. December wheat gained ⅞ of a cent at 90⅛ cents a bushel in the Chicago market.

Building construction shares found a ready speculative demand, indicating that some persons are assuming that, led by the public utility industry, a revival is coming. The electrical manufacturers were as buoyant as any. Westinghouse gained about 4 points and General Electric 3. United States Steel and other steel company shares climbed 1 to 3 points. Johns Manville and United States Gypsum turned in scores of 4 points or more each.

Dismounting.

Copper shares and the mining section generally was strong. Advances of 1 to 2 points were made by Nickel, Anaconda, Kennecott, American Smelting, United States Smelting, American Metal and General Cable. Motor stocks also improved, in spite of their unfavorable news, possibly helped by the magnanimous words of C. I. O. leader Lewis, who spoke of the need for a tie-up (not the kind he was talking about so much last spring) between capital and labor.

Were industry to find a common thinking ground with labor in the region of recognition of the fact that labor can't prosper unless industry does, the drive of those who are trying to use labor to break up private enterprise and the accumulation of private and corporate capital would lose its terrors. Meantime nothing so promotes a reconciliation between labor and capital as a touch of the slump.

Public utility shares were firm to strong. Most of the declines took place in inactive issues and in preferred stocks. Crucible preferred fell 10 points on the first sale. Some other preferreds gave up 2 to 4 points for no reason other than a thin market.

Utilities Ready to Go.

News over the holiday affecting securities markets was bullish on the intangible side and bearish where the factors were concrete. The news of the 25 per cent reduction in Chrysler operations had an unpleasant reception, although rumors that the leading makers, disappointed with the sale of the new models at the higher prices, were intending to curtail operations. Contraction in the motor industry makes it necessary to defer hope for an early upturn in the steel trade, and the numerous and apparently increasing industrial strikes and lay-offs show clearly enough that the business recession is going on apace.

On the brighter side there is some ground for hoping that proper measures may be taken to promote recovery. Few are inclined to put much faith in the reports of a settlement of disputes between the President and the large public utility systems until they see something concrete. The Consolidated Edison has announced a huge construction program, but doubtless the promise was a contingent one. If something real be given the utilities, something in no danger of being snatched away in a moment of pique, a first-rate start will have been given to a revival of the building construction industry, now falling from dullness into a real slump.

Hard Times Feared.

With other forms of building the trouble now is lack of funds not fear of hard times as much as anything else. Were building costs to be greatly cut the time has passed when that alone would be sufficient. It might have worked earlier in the year, but now the average man is becoming nervous of letting go of cash for any purpose. The best way to help building, as well as every other industry, is to do something broadly helpful to the whole country.

Anything calculated to restore confidence would have a surprisingly quick effect. In the steel industry, for example, orders are now being placed for immediate delivery. That is the usual practice in a time of business uncertainty and falling prices, but it also indicates that consumers are without supplies. The recession that has taken place in the placing of orders for steel over the last few months apparently, leaving the way open for a rapid gain in steel mill backlogs once forward buying reappears.

Estate Selling.

The illiquidity of the markets combined with the heavy and, in some cases, multiple taxation on estates, is said by close observers to be responsible for a great deal of liquidation. In some cases the selling is taking place in liquidation of the estates of deceased persons. Telephone, for example, is said to be under pressure on that account, just as it had to take a great deal of estate selling a few years ago. Other stocks that have been weak at the same time and probably from selling from the same sources are Central, Carbide, National Biscuit and Steel. Such selling in former times rarely caused more than a short dip in the stocks affected, but it now requires a long time and careful nursing to get rid of any respectable quantity of stocks.

Another Puzzle.

One portion of Chairman Douglas' diatribe against the Stock Exchange has been duly noted by those interested in the movement to raise the scale of commission charges. The suggestion that the Stock Exchange is trying to feed too many mouths and that the membership should be reduced does not seem to be apropos of anything in particular unless the chairman was referring to complaints that SEC regulations have reduced stock trading and hence make it desirable to charge higher commissions. Some Wall Street persons have rather taken it for granted that the SEC would approve higher commission rates, on the ground that they would tend to discourage speculative activity. That conclusion may have been drawn a bit hastily.

British View.

From the London Financial News: "Enormous investments were made in America two years ago, and those dollars may be sold in mass if their owners finally abandon hope of a recovery on Wall Street, or if the administration takes some maladroit action aimed at foreigners. The situation in France is more favorable to repatriation than it has been for some time. The recent decline has taken place just when the dollar is seasonably strongest. All this does not mean that it would be safe to sell dollars. The trend might be reversed overnight if Roosevelt undertook either of the two measures which would without fail revive American business: A large-scale building program or a large-scale rearmament program. Let us hope that it will be the former."

Treasury Sends Gold To France and Britain

The Treasury announced yesterday its third export of gold to France. A $5,000,000 shipment left for France Tuesday, making a total of $25,000,000 sent to that country this month. Another $5,000,000 of gold has been shipped to England. For the week ended November 19, $11,109,376 in gold was imported, mostly from Japan and Colombia. In the same week, $2,296,701 worth of silver came in.

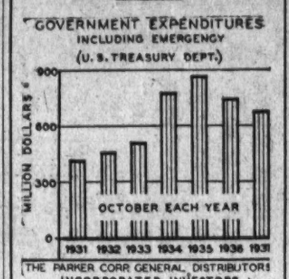
U. S. Expenditures Fall in October



Boston, Mass., Nov. 26.—It is encouraging to know that October Government expenditures declined, falling off 12 per cent from September expenditures and 9 per cent from those in October of last year. In spite of this decline, however, expenditures continue greater than revenues. At the end of October the Federal debt was about $37,000,000,000, up from a year ago more than $3,000,000,000.

Loan Money At High Level

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board announced yesterday that the Nation's banks now have more money to loan than at any time since the board forced a reduction in the supply last May 1. The loan supply, as measured by excess reserves of the banks, amounted to $1,140,000,000 on November 24, an increase of $40,000,000 from a week earlier.

Contrasted with the May 1 action, when the board cut excess reserves by increasing reserve requirements, the board now is forcing an increase in excess reserves by buying Government securities. The board wants to pile up sufficient cash in the banks so that when depositors withdraw money for Christmas shopping, enough will remain to supply any loan requests from business.

Last week, the board bought $9,000,000 worth of Treasury bills, giving the banks or their depositors that much more lendable cash. Since this buying program started three weeks ago, $38,000,000 worth of securities have been acquired.

Although early Christmas shopping brought a $20,000,000 increase in money in circulation, the total bank reserves, both required and excess, rose $27,000,000 to $6,949,000,000 in the week.

Virginia to Impose Curb on Buying By Installments

Richmond, Nov. 26 (AP).—M. E. Bristow, State commissioner of insurance and banking, today announced that on December 13 Virginia would become the first State in the union to regulate minimum down-payment and maximum number of payments for installment-buying financed by State banks and industrial loan associations.

Bristow said the regulation would apply to automobiles, refrigerators, radios, phonographs, stoves and kitchen equipment, washing machines, oil burners and stokers, plumbing equipment and vacuum cleaners.

The regulations, he said, were made possible through the voluntary action of the State banks and industrial loan associations. However, he said, installment financing by national banks and nationally operated companies will not be affected, inasmuch as they do not come under jurisdiction of the State bureau of insurance and banking.

Fire Razes Home Of Lieut. Headley

The three-story frame house of Lieut. B. N. Headley, U. S. A., retired, in Boyds, Md., was burned to the ground last night, with loss estimated at around $15,000.

First alarm was given by the engineer of a B. & O. freight train, standing on the line which passed near the house. He blew the train whistle until neighbors came out and saw the blaze. They called fire companies from Rockville, Gaithersburg, Washington, Grove and Hyattstown.

Firemen arrived too late to extinguish the blaze. Lieut. Headley, with his wife and other occupants of the house, had driven to Frederick, Md., for the evening.

Nazis Ban Post Magazine.

Berlin, Nov. 26 (U.P.).—The November 27 issue of the Saturday Evening Post was banned throughout Germany today by decree, supposedly because of an article by John Gunther, "This Peace Is a Cheat," which attacked Nazi and other totalitarian regimes.

Nicky Campaigns For Diner at Zoo; Digs at Woodring

Campaigning for a new restaurant for the Zoo and publishing an interview with Secretary of War Woodring, in which the Cabinet member opposes war and shows his young questioner toy cannon are features in the latest edition of Nicky's News, published by Nick Arundel, 10-year-old boy editor, at 4310 Cleveland avenue.

"Sod runs the Zoo restaurant and has to pay $750 a month," stated Nicky's News. "Why can't we have $750 worth of building then? If the restaurant got on fire it would burn right down, and the elephants would get scared and the giraffes would get out and die of numonia. This would be awful?"

Nicky observed that "The Secretary of War is a good guy," and added that a big army was what kept wars away.

"He said," continued Nicky, "that peace is like a kid who won't fight another kid who has a ball bat. He ment nobody wants war with a big army. There were toy cannons in his office."

Bob Burns Says—

It's funny how a habit can get a hold of us and finally get to be second-nature. That's the reason it is a good idea for a person to get away once in a while and change his mode of living.

I knew of a fella who was arrested and convicted of bigamy one time and when the judge asked him how in the world he happened to do a thing like that, the fella said "Well, they sold me a two-car garage, two telephones and so many two-pants suits and two of this and two of that, I just got in the habit!"

Prince Georges Police Reform Asked by Itzel

Modernization of Force to Fill Modern Needs Sought by Captain.

Modernization of the Prince Georges County Police Department in line with present-day needs was urged upon the board of Police commissioners for Prince Georges County yesterday by Capt. Joseph Itzel, of the Baltimore Police Department.

Capt. Itzel, well known in the county through his efforts in the Brady bombing case and the Loring murder case, has been assisting in training the county police and has made a survey of the needs of the department.

Among the improvements suggested by Capt. Itzel were call boxes at stategic points so that the policemen can call their stations without trying to locate a telephone in lonely sections. He also suggested that they should be provided with riot guns or shotguns. Capt. Itzel told the police commissioners that the department could be improved and modernized so that it would be a credit to the county at a cost of not more than two cents on the tax rate.

No action was taken by the commissioners, who will study the recommendations before taking any definite action.

The commissioners received an invitation to send a picked man to the May class of the Federal Bureau of Investigation training school. They voted to accept the invitation, but did not name the policeman who will attend the classes.

The commissioners announced that they had compiled with regulations of the workmen's compensation insurance law and that policemen injured in line of duty in the future will be provided for under the terms of their new insurance policy.

A resolution was received from the Federation of Citizens Associations of the county approving the manner in which the police have been trained and the "high-minded, efficient and impartial manner" in which the secretary of the board, W. R. C. Connick, has conducted examination and selection of men for the force and arranged for their training.

Another letter from Lieut. Walter T. Stearn, who conducted the Washington training school at which several county men were trained, commended the men for the attention and their high marks.

Police Magistrate Elmer H. Miller, of Baltimore, commended the single-handed capture of the "Maniac Bandit" by County Policeman Henry C. Briscoe, a "rookie" policeman, and Hugh C. Bickford, president of the Southern Prince Georges County Citizens Association, commended the police manual recently completed.

College Students Strike in Protest On Short Holiday

Dean John L. Davis said classes were proceeding on schedule and that the "strike is the result of the activity of only a few students and is not generally supported by other students of the college."

The protesting undergraduates, on foot and in automobiles, paraded in the west end of Lynchburg. There was no official estimate as to their number.

Dr. Davis said: "The situation this year is not related to that of last year, when the classes were suspended in a strike occasioned by the election of President Roosevelt—a strike in which the faculty was largely sympathetic."

Rep. O'Connell Seeks End of Spain Embargo

America Must Stamp Out Fascism, Congress for Peace Is Told.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 26.—Representative Jerry J. O'Connell (Democrat), of Montana, opened the People's Congress for Democracy and Peace tonight with a proposal that America remove the embargo against war goods to Spain, wage an "outright boycott of Japanese goods" and amend neutrality laws to apply only to aggressor nations.

The crowd, which filled more than one-half of the 9,000 seats at the Duquesne Garden, cheered the legislator's suggestions as well as his reference to a dozen pickets patrolling outside with banners reading:

"The Catholic Radical Alliance is for real action, not reaction;" "The Catholic Alliance is against all dictators, including Stalin," and "Fascism fattens on 'peace' hooey."

Dr. Harry F. Ward, chairman of the American League Against War and Fascism and professor of Christian ethics at the Union Theological Seminary, New York City, is general chairman of the congress.

Representative O'Connell said:

"I am a Catholic. I bow in no way in my Catholicism to any man or woman on that picket line and I say there is nothing in my religion which prohibits me from opposing fascism and war.

"I say to any who might attack me for upholding the cause of democracy in Spain that I am equally as justified in opposing Fascist terror as I was last summer in opposing Tom Girdler and his anti-labor forces in the United States. The American people must stand with the people of Spain in stamping out fascism."

Missing Wife, Baltimore Man Found in Miami

A month's search for the missing Mrs. Marguerite M. Reeves, wife of P. W. Reeves, of Washington, and Edward A. King, of Baltimore, named as corespondent in divorce action brought by Reeves, has ended in Miami, where police are holding King for extradition to Maryland.

A United States marshal in Miami also served both King and Mrs. Reeves with notice of divorce proceedings pending in the District Court, it was learned here. The suit, according to Reeves, will not be contested.

Reeves, secretary to former Representative Ralph Eltse (Republican), of California, and more recently an aide to Commissioner Paul V. McNutt in the Philippines, returned to this country from Manila in September. He narrowly escaped death when the President Hoover, on which he was a passenger, was bombed off the Chinese coast.

Mr. and Mrs. Reeves frequently entertained in their former Chevy Chase home and numbered many prominent political figures, including Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland, among their friends.

King, who is 40, is of Russian-English parentage and now has pending an application for American citizenship. He was married shortly after the war to the then Mrs. Viola Ruby. Mr. and Mrs. King made their home at 163 Monastery avenue, Baltimore.

Thomas, teacher of civics and history at Armstrong High School and a member of the citizens' advisory committee to the Commissioners on reorganization of the District Government, was elected president of the Federation of Civic Associations last night at a meeting held in the board room at the District Building.

His election followed an election by acclamation of the former president, Woolsey W. Hall, who declined to serve for the ensuing year or to entertain a motion for suspension of the rules. The election was consummated by 61 delegates from 21 constitutent organizations, who named Thomas president over B. T. Montgomery by a vote of 49 to 10.

The newly elected president is a native of the District and is the son of the late Charles Nelson Thomas, first colored juryman here in Reconstruction times, who served as an attorney in the office of the late A. G. Riddle. He has served as teacher in Dunbar High School and in Miner Teachers College and is a member of the Northeast Boundary Association.

Other officers elected included Mrs. Velma G. Williams, of Pleasant Plains, first vice president; Hugh Bradford, of the same association, second vice president; Ruby Moyse Kendrick, recording secretary; Mrs. May Curtis, assistant recording secretary; Lieut.
